Bolivian Battle Continues as President Flees

By JORGE CANELAS

LA PAZ, Bolivia (AP)—Fighting continued in La Paz Wednesday night as militia units loyal to deposed President Victor Paz Estenssoro resisted the nation's new military regime.

Seven persons were reported killed and 50 injured as air force planes attacked buildings occupied by police and strafed militiamen on a hill near the capital. Students and workers also attacked the buildings held by the police.

Paz, 57, who became president when a popular uprising threw out a military junta in 1952, fled with his family and aides to Peru in a Bolivian military plane.

He told newsmen in Lima his vice president, Air Force Gen. Gene Barrientos, was to blame for the coup.

"He wanted to be president so he rounded up air force and army support and overthrew me," Paz said. "I still have the support of my people."

Paz said the head of Bolivia's new military junta, Gen. Alfredo Obando Candia, "is the best of the lot. He has not mixed up

Mars Exploration Trip Set for Robot Mariner

By HOWARD BENEDICT

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) —A robot explorer named Mariner 3 rocketed away from earth today on the start of an intended 8½-month interplanetary journey to Mars to take pictures and probe scientific secrets.

An Atlas-Agena D rocket, 104 feet tall and weighing 138 tons, blazed away from its launching pad at 2:22 p.m. (EST).

The rocket was to propel the complex mechanical marvel across 350 million miles of space for a brief encounter with the Red planet next July 17.

If successful, the unmanned U.S. spacecraft will sweep within 8,600 miles of Mars and provide the first closeup information ever obtained about the planet. Many astronomers believe Mars harbors a basic form of life, such as vegetation.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration said Mariner 3 will not be able to detect life but is to gather information needed to design life-seeking capsules which the United States hopes to land on Mars in 1969.

Because Mars is in a favorable position for a launching from earth only one month out of each 25 and because of the importance of collecting information about the planet for future shots, the space agency scheduled two identical payloads for firing in the present November favorable period.

Kremlin Blasts 'Nationalism' in Red Camp as China Leaders Come for Talks

By GEORGE SYVERTSEN

MOSCOW (AP) — The Kremlin appealed today for an end to "nationalist narrow mindedness and discrimination" in world Communist ranks as Red China's Premier Chou En-lai and other foreign Communist chiefs converged on Moscow for talks with the Soviet Union.

The appeal published in Pravda, the organ of the Soviet Communist party, was clearly intended to serve as the keynote for the first big gathering of Communist rulers since Nikita Khrushchev's downfall last month.

"The Communist party of the Soviet Union calls for an implacable struggle against the appearance and survivals of any kind of nationalism and chauvinism and against tendencies toward national narrow mindedness and discrimination," Pravda's editorial said.

In their bitter feud with the Chinese during Khrushchev's time, the Soviets accused the Chinese of fomenting a schism in the Communist world with nationalist, chauvinist policies. The charge has been indirectly aimed at some East European communists, most notably the Romanians.

Another article in Pravda reaffirmed another Soviet policy attacked by the Chinese, belief in the possibility of Communist takeovers through peaceful means in the underdeveloped countries of Asia, Africa and Latin America.

The article, by Prof. E. M Zhukov, also restated the Soviet

Romney Emerges as Top Figure In GOP Politics

By JACK BELL

WASHINGTON (AP) — Michigan Gov. George Romney emerged today as the strong man at the ballot box of a Republican party shattered by President Johnson's towering presidential election victory.

In the almost incredible vote avalanche in which Johnson registered strongly in nearly every precinct outside five Southern states and Arizona, Romney won re-election by cutting deep into Democratic Detroit, upping his previous support in Negro districts and winning 40 per cent backing from those who voted for the Democratic president.

Defeated GOP presidential nominee Barry Goldwater has said he does not intend to yield the reins of the Republican party. But he conceded that he thinks the GOP will pick "another man to run" in 1968 "and as of now that would be fine with me."

It would require considerable reorientation for Goldwater to gravitate to the support of Romney for this somewhat politically dubious honor four years hence. The Arizona senator said during the campaign he could understand why some "moderate" Republicans didn't support him. But he listed Romney as an unfathomable "Mormon preacher."

Romney, who wouldn't back Goldwater actively because of the latter's vote against the Civil Rights Act, already was on the offensive. His state's GOP national committeeman, John Martin, called for the dumping of Goldwater's personally selected chairman of the Republican National Committee, Dean Burch.

Barry Decides to fight to Keep Leadership

By WALTER R. MEARS

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Sen. Barry Goldwater, determined to keep the Republican party on a conservative course, heads back to Washington Friday to handle some of the leftover business of the Senate seat he gave up for his losing race against President Johnson.

While more liberal members of the party made plans to rebuild the GOP in their image, Goldwater declared: "I don't think we can build a Republican party on their concepts which, in my opinion, have no difference at all with the Democratic concept."

For the moment Goldwater's long-range future remained obscure. But the beaten Republican nominee has served notice he plans to spend a lot of time working to lead and strengthen the GOP.

At a concession news conference Wednesday, Goldwater said he does not think the conservative cause "has been hurt at all," despite his landslide loss.

In the days ahead Goldwater plans to take care of some Senate mail and some other matters in Washington, then head for a vacation with his wife at an undisclosed spot.

Conservatism, he insisted, is a philosophy the Republican party "must cling to and strengthen in the years ahead."

Goldwater said he does not expect to be the nominee again in 1968, declaring his role "would be better played" in building Republican organization and raising party funds.

That is the job he did before he rose to top the Republican ticket.

Goldwater had no specific plans to offer on the shape of his drive to rebuild the beaten GOP.

Would he meet soon with other Republican leaders?

"They wouldn't be able to find me," he said.

The senator plans to move to Phoenix eventually but said he will keep his apartment in Washington.

"I am not seeking employment there," he added.

His old Washington job went to Arizona Gov. Paul Fannin, elected to fill the Senate seat Goldwater has held for 12 years.

Goldwater withdrew from that

Voter Turnout Falls Far Short Of Expectations

WASHINGTON (AP) — Still incomplete returns from Tuesday's election indicate that the total voter turnout fell far short of the predicted 71.1 million but probably topped the 1960 total.

With 173,152 of 175,756 polling units counted, President Johnson had 42,038,243 votes to 26,449,960 for Sen. Barry Goldwater, a two-party total of 68,488,203.

In 1960, the total of presidential votes for all candidates — Democrat John F. Kennedy, Republican Richard M. Nixon and minor parties — plus those cast for unpledged presidential electors in Louisiana and Mississippi totaled 68,832,778.

The 2,604 precincts still unreported come mostly from sparsely settled areas, which probably have about 200 votes each.

This would mean the present totals will be swelled by about half a million votes from these 2,604 precincts, plus the minor party vote estimated at about 200,000 nased on the 1960 totals.

Ford Is Faced By Deadline; Talks Continue

DETROIT (AP) — Local-level negotiators raced against a 10 a.m. Friday strike deadline in trying to reach labor agreements today at the Ford Motor Co.

The United Auto Workers threatens a walkout at Ford unless the settlements are reached to go along with an already agreed-upon national contract.

At last count, approximately a score of agreements were yet outstanding. The UAW has 90 local bargaining units in Ford.

General Motors, crippled for weeks by a UAW strike but close to high-gear production again, said it now lacks only five local agreements with the union. GM has 130 local bargaining units.

GM said ratification by union members of latest agreements at Fisher Body and Chevrolet at St. Louis, Buick-Oldsmobile-Pontiac at Southgate, Calif., and Chevrolet assembly at Framingham, Mass., would boost its production to 88 per cent capacity.

Charges of 'Obscene' Mail Are Filed

A charge of sending obscene letters through the mail was filed in Justice of the Peace James K. Quine's court Wednesday against Colin James Guthrie, 35, 520 N. Tejon St., the district attorney's office said.

Judge Quine would not allow the Gazette Telegraph to see the charge and said it was suppressed and no information would be released. When asked why he replied, "Because I want it to be."

According to a police report Guthrie was arrested Monday after Robert F. Fox, Denver postal inspector came to police headquarters and told officers that another man had been arrested in California on a similar charge. The man who was identified by the name of Hal was found to have 15 letters in his possession alleged to have been sent by Guthrie plus a number of poems described as "very obscene."

The report continues saying that Guthrie told Hal he had "one of the largest collections of obscene literature and photographs second to the post office."

In an interview with police officers Guthrie is alleged to have said he is an archbishop of a church located at Westminster, Colo. and that he was hoping to be arrested on a federal warrant as he wished to test private communication through the mails.

Guthrie is also alleged to have

McNamara Vetoed Viet Base Guard, Report Says

By ROBERT S. ALLEN and PAUL SCOTT

WASHINGTON — (Special) — Defense Secretary McNamara personally vetoed the assignment of Marines or Army special forces to guard the Bien Hoa airfield where a surprise Viet Cong artillery and mortar attack inflicted heavy personnel and bomber losses.

Lack of adequate protection was directly responsible for the success of the Communists' costly hit-and-run blitz.

After a first-hand inspection several months ago, General William Westmoreland, U. S. commander of South Viet Nam, strongly recommended that a large contingent of Marines or Army special forces be sent there expressly to safeguard eight major airbases.

This urgent request was conveyed to McNamara through Ambassador Maxwell Taylor.

The proposal was turned down by the Pentagon chief on the ground it was contrary to the basic policy determining the dispatch of U. S. combat troops to South Viet Nam.

Under this so-called "rules of

Republicans Get Net Gain in Governorships

By CARL R. BAUMAN

WASHINGTON (AP) — About the only solace Republicans could find in Tuesday's election returns was in the 25 governorship races. There they had a net gain of one.

Particularly satisfying to the Republicans was the defeat of two Democratic governors seeking re-election, Albert Rosellini of Washington and John W. Rynolds of Wisconsin. Rosellini ran for a third term. Reynolds a second.

In addition, the Republicans took over the Massachusetts state house when former Gov. John A. Volpe staged a political comeback to defeat Lt. Gov. Francis X. Bellotti.

Last Contact Of Plane Was With Pueblo

LA JUNTA, Colo. (AP) — A twin-engine plane with five men aboard was sought in a widening air and ground search of southeastern Colorado today.

The missing plane left Denver on a flight Tuesday to Lubbock, Tex. Its last radio contact was made near Pueblo. There was rain and extreme air turbulence at the time.

About 100 men in 25 planes and 18 ground units searched a 6,000-square-mile area Wednesday. A similar search was resumed today.

In the missing plane were Ernest Marmon, 38, Max McNeil, 45, and Mac Green, 37, of Dallas, Tex., executives of the Dr. Pepper Co., a soft drink firm; Gregg Sherry, 36, a Chicago advertising man, and J. A. Willess of Dallas, the pilot.

CAP search units were organized as well in New Mexico and Texas.

Demos Win Legislative Control in Several States

By JOHN MORGANTHALER

NEW YORK (AP) — Democrats ousted Republicans from control of both houses of the legislatures in five states, took over one house in five more states, and scored gains in a dozen others.

The Democrats took over one house in Colorado, Wisconsin, Montana, Wyoming and North Dakota.

New York — Democrats won the Senate 34-24 and the Assembly 88-62, to get control of both houses for the first time in 30 years. The GOP leaders of both houses were defeated in their districts. With present Republican margins of 33-25 and 85-65, Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller is expected to call a quick special session to reapportion the districts before the Democrats take over.

Michigan — Latest returns gave the Democrats margins of 72-38 in the House and 23-15 in the Senate, reversing the GOP majorities of 58-52 and 21-11. The Democratic sweep followed a reapportionment, but Democratic leaders have promised an effort at harmony with GOP Gov. George Romney.

Indiana — Democrats won both houses for the first time since 1936, taking the House 77-23 and the Senate 35-15. The GOP margins had been 56-44 and 25-24 with one vacancy due to death.

Iowa — The Democrats won both houses for the first time in 30 years, taking the Senate 35-24 and the House 124-101. The GOP controls the present legislature, elected before a reapportionment, by 38-12 in the Senate and 79-29 in the House. The reapportionment added seats.

Utah — The Senate will be Democratic 15-12 and the House 39-30, reversing GOP margins of 13-12 and 34-30 in the 1963 legislature. A reapportionment added seats.

Colorado — The Democrats captured the House 42-23, reversing a 41-24 GOP majority,

Common Market Political Unity Is Being Proposed

By CARL HARTMAN

BONN, Germany (AP) — West Germany's five partners in the European Common Market are examining a plan by Chancellor Ludwig Erhard for a new step on the long road to a United States of Europe.

The plan calls for a political organization of France, West Germany, Italy, Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxemburg. The way is left open for Britain to come in at an unspecified time if the founding members agree. No one expects that time to come as long as President Charles de Gaulle, who blackballed Britain for the Common Market, holds power in France.

The plan is still secret, but according to widespread reports in Bonn, the chief feature is a system of regular meetings of the leaders of the member governments — De Gaulle, Erhard, the other premiers and their ministers of foreign affairs,

Scientist Says Shortage Of Women Is Possible

CHICAGO (AP) — A medical educator says technology may create a new shortage to mankind — women.

If infant mortality rates could be decreased, Dr. Sheldon Berger said, a shortage of women throughout the world might result.

The ironic reason, Dr. Berger said, is that the male adult is evidently less fit for survival than the female.

Dr. Berger, associate director of Evanston Hospital's Department of Research and Education, said Wednesday that his assumption is not science fiction.

He said that, generally, 106 males are born for every 100 females.

At age 30, Berger said, the ratio is evened at 100 to 100 because males generally die at an earlier age than females. After age 30, he said, the figure rapidly drops as males die and females live to an older age.

Berger said medical studies show that at the time babies are conceived the ratio is probably 120 or 150 males to each 100 females.

"This figure," he said, "falls to 106 boys at birth because the male fetus, like the male adult, is evidently less fit for survival."

"But if medical research were to find a way to further reduce pre-natal mortality, we may see a ratio of 50 per cent more boys than girls at birth, or 150 males to 100 females," he said.

"Were this situation to persist at the age of marriage," Berger continued, "we would have a world shortage of marriageable females. It could happen tomorrow, depending on research, or take 100 years."

"This is not science fiction," he said, "but a reasonable assumption. It is very likely to happen some day.

Berger told the annual meeting of the Institute of Home Office Underwriters: "Women would assume great scarcity value, and certain significant social consequences must be considered."

Another Attempt Made to Save Whooping Crane

By BOB TRIMBEE

EDMONTON, Alta. (AP) — Canadian and United States wildlife officials have given up direct intervention to stop the whooping crane from skidding into extinction.

The wildlife departments in both countries have agreed to launch an egg - gathering program in Wood Buffalo Park, 600 miles north of Edmonton, and raise the stately birds in captivity.

Nature can't be blamed for the decline of North America's tallest bird. Civilization forced it to retreat into remote regions and wanton slaughter reduced the wildlife population to 33 from a peak of several thousand 150 years ago.

Through the captive rearing program it is hoped to raise up to 7,000 of the spectacular white cranes, which boast a wing span of seven feet and stand almost 5½ feet tall.

"It's not a new idea," said Ron Mackay, operations supervisor for the western region of the Canadian Wildlife Service. "Nor is it one that has the unqualified support of all wildlife experts, including men in government wildlife service.

"But to be realistic, it's the only tack we can take. We've tried to let the birds increase on their own without much success. To continue as we now are doing would only contribute to the eventual extinction of the whoopers."

Not so, says Roland C. Clement, staff biologist with the National Audubon Society.

Clement said rather than gamble with the wild whooper population, wildlife officials should concentrate on ways to increase its food supply which in turn would increase the carrying capacity of the winter home of the birds at Aransas, Tex.

"We know so little about their distribution and habits, it would be folly to barge in with helicopters in the expectation of stealing eggs without jeopardizing the whooping crane's climb back to safe numbers . . .

"It's time we recognized that it is pure dogmatism, a false pride in our fragmentary knowledge of nature, to say that a species is in a cul-de-sac or doomed to extinction. We simply do not know what the future holds for the whoopers."

The new step taken by the governments will see six eggs or the product of three nests taken from Wood Buffalo Park in 1965. The eggs will be flown to a propagation center in the United States where they will be hatched and the young birds reared with special facilities.

Brown said the government would study ways to move offices from London to underpopulated areas.

Actors See Other Actors, Wally Says

By JOAN CROSBY

NEW YORK (NEA)—Richard Crenna would consider it a personal favor if television viewers would sample his highly acclaimed, but low-rated CBS-TV series about politics, 'Slattery's People.

"We anticipated the show would be a slow starter, but we received marvelous criticism. Maybe 10 per cent of the critics gave us what most shows would consider good reviews, but with some reservations. The other 90 per cent raved. After the second show, a lot of the critics re-reviewed our show and almost 100 per cent accepted us critically."

One of the problems for Slattery's People, by Bing Crosby It is competing with Ben Casey (ironically turned out, like Slattery's People, by Bign Crosby Productions) and The Alfred Hitchcock Hour. Surveys show many people turn off their sets at 10 (when the three shows come on). "At that hour, with fewer people watching," Crenna said, "you don't split an audience. If you do split no one wins."

As Slattery, Crenna, an idealistic state legislator, has finally been allowed to grow up professionally. He was playing a teen-ager at the age of 30 on Our Miss Brooks. He says he is fantalistic about his show's future. "I have been in television for so long on Our Miss Brooks and The Real McCoys that it is difficult to be optimistic. We just try to make the best show we can and hope someone watches."

Those who do watch the show, and recognize Crenna on the street, are very polite. "They say things like 'Good luck on the show.' But the fans of The Real McCoys used to ask things like 'How's Grandpa?' I think that personal identification is the thing that makes a show a success. I would have much more assurance if someone were to come up to me and say, 'Hey, Slattery, I have a parking ticket I would like you to fix.'"

Wally Cox thinks casting the right actor for the right part is a refinement of sensitivity and insight, but not very often.

"There's on awful lot of, 'Oh, yeah, how about him?' casting that comes about because you walk down a corridor past someone's office at the moment he is looking to fill a part. I heard about a 72-year-old Swiss Cartographer who walked into a movie producer's office on business having to do with maps. The producer looked up and said, 'By gad, I'm glad they finally cast the Indian chief.' Now the cartographer has a new career doing Indian chiefs."

Wally, well remembered for his delightful Mr. Peepers series, is taking a leave from his irregularly scheduled appearances on Goodson-Todman game shows to do a role in Marlon Brando's movie "Morituri." When he returns to New York, he will do more game shows.

Wally's first game show appearance was 10 years ago. He was on What's My Line? He misunderstood the deferential attitude assumed by the perfect panelist and "instead of making a substantial contribution to the progress of the game, I impeded it. I was afraid of boring people, so I tried to make jokes."

So he was banished from the Goodson-Todman files, to return chastened a decade later. "Now I get the idea," he smiled "The audience wants to see the game, not a loused up version. Not that I intended to louse it up 10 years ago."

Shy, wispy Wally, who had been doing commercials before his panel appearances, says he never really took an active interest in his career until two years ago.

"I let myself get pushed into the success and I didn't like most of the things about it. I was always uncomfortable in public. Now I find I am having a chance to do the things I want to do.

"I am 40 now, and if you have lived that much time as a human being, you tend to portray one. Actors generally don't see much of life. They only see other actors."

Ex-Chauffeur Of Kaiser Is Satisfied

AMSTERDAM (AP) — Sixty-year-old Gerrit Hardeman — the onetime chauffeur of Germany's Emperor Wilhelm II — is a gardener nowadays, and seems satisfied with what life has brought him.

With a faint smile he recalls the "golden days," when he was "Oscar," the Kaiser's chauffeur.

The entire imperial household and Wilhelm himself called him Oscar, a name they considered more suitable than Gerrit for an imperial chauffeur.

On Jan. 14, 1922, he entered the service of the Kaiser as private chauffeur. Wilhelm then resided in Holland at Huize Doorn, a castlelike mansion the Dutch government put at his disposal after his flight from Germany in the final days of World War I.

Today, 42 years later, Hardeman still works on the estate. But, instead of his smart chauffeur's uniform and high boots he now wears drab khaki gardener's overalls. His fingers clutch hoe and spade instead of fashionable wheels of swank limousines. His attention, once focused on the road surface, now penetrates to the lower layers of the Dutch soil as he plugs and roots the earth for planting and weeding.

While getting his hands dirty he thinks back about the days when he detested the tiniest spot on his immaculate clean uniform.

The Emperor kidded him for this once while strenuously chopping trees, his favorite sport. Oscar stood looking on, and seeing this the Emperor stopped chopping and said: "Oscar, how immaculately clean you are; a model man in a model uniform. Please help me pile up these heavy woodblocks."

Oscar's uniform was covered with stains in no time.

"I think it must have been an awful clumsy sight, because suddenly the Emperor roared with laughter and told me it was enough.

"'Oscar,'" the Emperor said "'Just realize that one minute you are everything and the other you are just plain nothing.'"

In the 18 years he worked as Wilhelm's chauffeur, Oscar knew the Kaiser to be a man who could easily fly off the handle, but, who was also a modest and pleasant person to deal with.

When the Second World War was looming in 1940, Oscar heard the Emperor mumble to himself: "This time it will be terrible."

Oscar was drafted into the Army. In the lobby of the imperial mansion he took leave of Wilhelm, who shook hands with his chauffeur and asked him to keep hold of himself.

His last words were: "Oscar, this might be the last time." Indeed these were the last words Hardeman was ever to hear from him.

When Hardeman returned to Doorn there were German guards at the gates and German officers walked in and out of the richly furnished rooms.

"They made a habit of yelling at me, and I did not like it a bit. So once, when one of the officers was carrying on at the top of his voice, I got furious and told him: 'The German Emperor never treated me like this. I only wish you had just a little bit of his good manners.'

"The officer blushed crimson and stammered that I should forget the whole matter; the war was acting on his nerves, he said.

"I was 18 when I went to work with the Emperor and I could talk on and on about my experiences." Hardeman says staring at two photographs made in the "golden days."

His future is that of gardener. Two nights a week he also works as a watchman on the Doorn estate.

She Will Not Enter Police Patrol Car

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — Eight-year-old Denise Bowman was more than an hour late returning home from school Wednesday and her mother telephoned police for help.

Four squad cars sped to the area. Patrolman D. D. Welch soon found Denise walking toward her home. He stopped and asked her to get into the car.

Denise refused.

"My mama told me not to talk to strangers or get into a car," she said.

Screen Tough Guy Plays Role of Pope

Work began Wednesday at Sotto il Monte, Pope John's hometown.

The director of the Italian-French production said Steiger will not use any special makeup in portraying the portly, peasant priest. He is interested more in capturing Pope John's spirit than in striving for a close, physical impersonization.

ADOLESCENT EMOTIONAL ACHES

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Children's Hospital has a special Clinic for Adolescents which treats emotional problems as well as physical ills.

The present director, Dr. Francis Eberly, says a broken romance or bad case of acne can cause a teen - age stomach ache that is just as real as one caused by green apples or an oversized hamburger.

"They really hurt, you see," he says, "but we have no magic medicine or pill to cure them. We talk to them, explain there is nothing seriously wrong, then try to get at the root of the trouble."

The clinic has is own staff plus consulting specialists and is the largest of its kind in the Midwest.

By DOROTHEA M. BROOKS
United Press Inecrnational

NEW YORK (UPI) — "Good Design Makes Money."

This title for the first article in a new series on design for builders in a leading trade publication is of more than passing interest to the prospective homeowner.

It is one more indication (there have been several in recent months) that teven subdivision builders are waking up to the fact that it is no longer enough to provide just shelter —even well-built shelter. It offers hope that the well-designed home, once limited pretty much to the custom market, will be more widely available.

As the National Association of Homebuilders tells its members in the article on design:

"Some houses — dipped-in-brick-picture-windowed, and all-in-a-row — have only basic shelter appeal. Today's secondtime buyers, today's young executives on the move, today's savvy just-marrieds, want more than shelter. They demand the best design their money can buy. If they want Contemporary, a glass wall and an extra planter won't turn last year's house into today's sale. If they want Traditional, shutters and small-paned windows (front facade only) won't turn a looker into a buyer.

"You've got to earn your buyer's money with good design more than ever before. Good proportions, care and attention to exteriors, the really better living that new floor plans allow: these true features are replacing sales gimmicks and fads for today's profit-making builders."

In the association's advice to builders are many hints for the proective buyer. Good design, NAHB points out, doesn't demand any certain style of architecture; it is as important an ingredient for the Traditional house as for the most Contemporary. Whatever their style, houses today have to "work" well:

Room arrangement must provide for automobile-oriented living.

A plan must allow both family togetherness and privacy.

There must be a private area outdoors, and it must be easy to get to.

The house must be easy to keep clean, and must have useful and convenient storage.

There must be adequate space for entertaining in at least one room — preferably in more than one, and with easy access to outdoor living areas.

"People buy the sunlight streaming in a window." Therefore, NAHB points out, good design must incorporate emotional appeal—"that tantalizing sum of a lot of individual qualities that somehow spark a buyer with desire for your product."

To achieve this appeal, NAHB stresses the importance of professional help from people who understand proportion, texture and color and have an appreciation of construction and building economics. Such a team costs money, and requires leadership on the part of the builder, but it can combine stock parts into an out-of-the-ordinary finished product. It can use skillful detailing to count for more than cover-up make good design proportions gimcracks would. It can choose with its simplicity, NAHB products to add their character stresses.

Good design uses materials that must open and close properly, efficiently. Windows not only but also add their good proportions to the house. Masonry tions to the house. Masonry should provide a genuine feeling of substance and good exterior organization. Siding covers so efficiently that it should add its design to the large areas for which it is made.

Good design, too, makes for easier, more economical construction. Simple, straightforward plans simplify construction and finish, allowing large sheet materials to be used in large sheets. Modular construction can add to the good proportion of a house, and the rooms in it. Simple room arrangements allow flexible use of the spaces for family living.

The tract house, NAHB emphasized, must allow for enough variation from the model to make the buyer feel his house is designed just for his family. "Variety in the location of parts of the house—garage, entry, courts, etc., — plus a variety of levels that can adapt houses to varying sites, all contribute."

TESTING HIS THEORY

"I thought there might be a squirrel in there," he told police later. He was right.

CIG Employes Rout Out the 'Pig' In the Pipeline to Solve Problem

By SHARON ERVIN
Gazette Telegraph Staff Writer

A "pig" in a pipeline solved a problem which actually had never been examined and the credit goes to six engineers at Colorado Interstate Gas here in Colorado Springs.

The six men involved are David W. Bean, Otto Praeger Jr., Burt Schaberg, Donald Vinson, Robert Olson and Harold Eagleton. They received a patent Sept. 15 (No. 3,148,689) for their "Method and System for Gas Transmission."

The project began about the middle of 1958 when Interstate noticed that it was taking more and more pressure to send natural gas through the pipelines into the homes of consumers.

"During the winter, it got especially "bad," David Bean, a pioneer in discovering the problem, said. "Our pipelines are built to carry about 960 pounds of pressure. That is more than adequate for our needs, or at least we thought it was. But that winter we began to notice that it was taking nearly the maximum amount of pressure in the pipeline to service our customers. We began to wonder if, under the worst possible conditions, we could do our job." Donald Vinson nodded his agreement.

"We asked around some," Vinson said, "but no one was sure. Some of the older fellows in the business said there was nothing to be done about it. No one knew what caused it and there was no solution."

"Actually that made it more of a problem and a challenge to us to solve it," Bean added.

"To understand the whole thing you have to start at the beginning. When the natural gas is taken out of the ground, it is run through a separator to filter out the water and oil which come up with it. In the separator, the gas is heated to about 70 degrees before it is sent into the pipes. During the summer months, we have no problem. But during the winter, the ground is cold and the temperature difference between the gas and the ground outside causes the gas to condense or form liquid. It's the same thing that causes 'sweat' to form on the side of a drinking glass when the contents is cold and the room is warm.

"Of course, we knew this liquid was forming in the lines and we had release valves to help control it. These were opened once a day and the accumulated gasoline was blown into the atomsphere. But this wasn't solving our problem." Otto Praeger, one of the men who became involved in the early stages of the project, cleared his throat.

"What we didn't know," Praeger said, "was that some of this liquid had accumulated in the low places in the pipelines and couldn't be blown out. We had to get used to the idea that the pressure in the lines was trying to push this liquid along but was failing. And we had to keep reminding ourselves and each other that the pressure we lost on each hill, we couldn't regain. The liquid collected in the low spot before a hill was multiplied by all the hills the line traveled over.

"After we figured out what the problem might be, we had to convince other people that this was the problem and that it could be solved. Then we began working on a solution.

"We came up with several other ideas before we settled on a final one," Vinson smiled.

"One of them would have cost a million dollars," Vinson laughed, "but we thought we probably ought to be able to do better than that."

"Then we though of using spheres made of foam rubber or plastic," Bean said, picking up the story. "This same type sphere had been used for cleaning out the pipelines. What we decided on was a sphere which would completely fill up the pipe so that it could push the liquid along in front of it. The problem here was that we have four different sizes of pipes, 16-18-, 20- and 24-inch. We had to figure out how to set off a sphere of the correct size when the gas moved into a larger pipe. We had to put in a bin for the spheres to fall into when they had run their course. Also, we had to figure out how to trap the liquid in storage tanks without trapping the spheres and the natural gas. Among the six of us, we were able to work it all out.

"The way it's set up now, we have 10 spheres at each starting point. The first works on a time cycle and starts between 2 and 4 a.m. so that the whole setup is in operation by the time of the greatest need each day. A small sphere starts off in the small pipelines. Pressure forces it through the line and the sphere pushes any liquid in the line along ahead of it.

"At the joint where the small pipe joins with a larger one, the small sphere triggers a release which allows the next size sphere to fall in behind the smaller one. And soon.

"At the end of the line the liquid flows into a storage trap. The trap is covered with a grating so that the gasoline flows down into it to be stored, but the spheres continue into the receiver, another strange bin. The spheres are picked up once every week or so and returned to their starting places. The gasoline in the storage trip is sold to a nearby gasoline plant and is sent to them through a small pipeline.

"Since we began collecting this liquid, we have found that we get as much as 30,000 gallons on cold day That's worth about $100,000 a year. That savings is one which the company can pass on to the consumer.

"Besides all of that, this system is safer than the old method and will pay for itself in about three years."

Since the "Method and System for Gas Transmission" was finished, gas companies throughout the United States have adopted it. Otto Praeger has retired (he claims that work on the system did not force him out, but that he just got old) and Norman Eagleton has moved from Colorado Springs and has set up his own business elsewhere.

Taft Loses, Young Wins In Ohio Vote

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Sen. Stephen M. Young, who said "the heck with it" and went to bed thinking himself a loser election night, faces a second term as U.S. senator from Ohio.

Republican Rep. Robert Taft Jr., who held a premature victory celebration when it appeared he had survived the Johnson landslide and unseated Young, says he'll wait for an official canvas of the voting before deciding whether to request a recount.

Young, a 75-year-old hard-line Democrat, told friends at Washington Wednesday night that he had tried unsuccessfully election night to call Taft and personally concede the election.

At about that time, Taft was telling a news conference, "I think I've established some independency (sic) of my own," alluding to his father, and the late "Mr. Republican" Sen. Robert A. Taft.

But at Midday Wednesday, the lead went over to Young for good. Final Network Election Service figures give him a 13,074-vote margin.

Taft said: "In view of the extremely close race and the surprising results in certain areas, I will await the official canvass before making any further statement or decision (on a recount request)."

In Young's absence Wednesday morning — the Senator was driving to Washington, still behind the tabulations — one aide admitted, "No matter what happens there probably will be a recount."

The Young-Taft cliffhanger was compounded by a combination of late Cleveland votes, almost solidly for Young, a Clevelander, and an NES tabulation error that went uncorrected for a while in the wee hours. The counting error gave Taft a big unearned edge that quickly disappeared when the mistake was detected.

President Johnson carried the Buckeye State by more than a million votes, a record, but had trouble dragging fellow Democrats Young and Congress-at-large nominee Robert E. Sweeney with him .Sweeney's margin over Rep. Oliver P. Bolton in the race for the seat Taft gave up was 150,000.

Name of Dentistry Degree Is Changed

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The School of Dental Medicine at the University of Pennsylvania has changed the name of the traditional D.D.S. — Doctor of Dental Surgery — degree given its graduates.

From now on, Dean Lester W. Burket said Wednesday, they will receive a Doctor of Dental Medicine degree or D.M.D. for the Latin version — Dentariae Medicinae Doctor.

Dentists today, he said, no longer are limited to drilling, filling and pulling teeth, but are increasingly skilled in "basic science and total patient care."

Miller Had No Backing of Home Folks

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson, Sen. Barry Goldwater and Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey all had the backing of the homefolks in Tuesday's election. Rep. William E. Miller didn't.

Johnson, who voted in Johnson City, carried that tiny Texas community by 392 to 74 for Goldwater. Gillespie County, in which his ranch is located, went Democratic in a presidential election for the first time since 1932.

Goldwater, who lives on a hill overlooking Phoenix, Ariz., carried his home precinct, the city and Maricopa County, the state's largest, as Arizona narrowly backed its favorite son.

Humpurey, who lives in Waverly, Minn., carried his home precinct 307 to 109 and Wright County 8,686 to 5,473 as Minnesota voted Democratic.

Only Miller, the Republican vice-presidential nominee, was rejected. Niagara County, which Miller has represented in Congress since 1950, voted for the Johnson-Humphrey ticket 66,004 to 27,998.

Goldwater Buys Wry Clown Joke

Goldwater drove to Scottsdale, near his home, to buy some paintings. One was a Mark Coomer painting of a clown weeping.

He bought it for his daughter Peggy, saying she likes clowns.

a-year job, found some "encouraging" signs in a debacle in which Goldwater won six states and 52 electoral votes to Johnson's 44 states and overwhelming 486 Electoral College ballots.

The GOP national chairman said the election had established a "true two-party system in the South" — which the Democrats debated hotly; had won more than 26 million voters to "the conservative philosophy" and had ended the campaign "fiscally sound and strong."

Johnson, with more than 41 million votes from 98 per cent of the nation's polling places, was playing the part of the magnanimous winner. He had rolled up about 61.4 per cent of the total vote.

At his ranch near Johnson City, Tex., the President and his wife welcomed Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota, the vice president-elect and his wife for a brief visit before the Humphreys set off on a vacation trip to the Virgin Islands.

Johnson's observation on the election results was: "I doubt that there ever has been so many people saying so many things alike on Election Day."

Humphrey said the Johnson landslide "means good, strong leadership for the nation" that "is good for the world." Congratulatory messages poured in to the winners from all over the globe, including a pledge from the Soviet Union's new leaders to seek accommodation by negotiation.

Although Goldwater said he doesn't believe the conservative cause was hurt by the election results, there was plenty of dissent among fellow Republicans.

Moderates of the party looked to former President Dwight D. Eisenhower to provide some help for them in what could become a lengthy battle to attempt to dislodge the conservative Burch and other Goldwater supporters who filled nearly every national party office.

One of Eisenhower's chief lieutenants in any such move would be Sen. Hugh Scott, who squeaked through to re-election despite Johnson's sweep of Pennsylvania. Scott had valuable experience in this field. He saved his chairmanship of the national committee by a one-vote margin after Thomas E. Dewey lost the 1948 election.

The emergence of Romney as an outstanding GOP vote getter did not necessarily mean that the moderates would rally around him in their fight to regain control of the party. The Michigan governor, a favorite of Eisenhower, did not reveal himself as a team player when the moderates tried unsuccessfully through the candidacy of Gov. William W. Scranton of Pennsylvania to halt Goldwater's nomination.

Any organized opposition that developed seemed more likely to come from among Republican governors, with Gov. Robert E. Smylie of Idaho as one likely spearhead.

On the Democratic side, Johnson appeared to own his party lock stock and barrel.

Former Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy, brother of the late president, hardly seemed in any position after his election to the Senate in New York to raise any challenge to the President's leadership. It seemed clear that Kennedy would not have defeated GOP Sen. Kenneth B. Keating of New York if Johnson hadn't carried the state by a record plurality of nearly 2.5 million.

Although Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, another brother of the late president, was re-elected in Massachusetts, there was lacking the elements of any significant structural challenge to Johnson when Democratic Sen. Pierre Salinger, a potential ally, went down to defeat in California.

There was a long string of members of Congress who obviously owed their victories to Johnson's massive vote-collecting ability. These included Sen. Stephen M. Young of Ohio, who came out on top in a battle with GOP Rep. Robert Taft Jr.

While the extent of Johnson's landslide was not open to question, there remained some question about the mandate the voters had given him. The one issue the computers couldn't be programmed to answer accurately was: How many citizens voted against Goldwater instead of for Johnson?

Kremlin Blasts Nationalism As Chinese Come for Talks

view that war is not inevitable and that peaceful coexistence with the West is not only possible but desirable. The Chinese have vigorously disagreed on this also.

The Chinese premier headed a seven-man delegation to the celebration Saturday commemorating the 47th anniversary of the Bolshevik revolution.

It will be the first high-level meeting between the Soviet and Chinese Communists since peace talks between the two parties broke down in Moscow in July 1963. After that the conflict between the two nations sharpened and split the world Communist movement.

The removal last month of Nikita Khrushchev had raised the possibility of a surface reconciliation. The former Soviet leader was a personal target for much of Peking's bitterness.

Chou was accompanied by Vice Premier Ho Lung, a member of the Chinese party's policy-making Politburo; Kang Sheng, an alternate member of the Politburo; Wu Hsiu-Chuan and Vice Foreign Minister Liu Hsiao, both members of the Chinese party's Central Committee, and Vice Foreign Minister Chiao Kuang-hua. They were being joined in Moscow by Pan Tzu-li, China's ambassador to the Soviet Union.

Wu, Kang Sheng and Pan took part in the unsuccessful Moscow talks in 1963. Liu is a former ambassador to Moscow.

Red China's allies in the Communist world also were sending top-level delegations to Moscow. Premier Pham Van Dong headed a North Vietnamese delegation that passed through Peking today.

Cuba's delegation arrived in Moscow today. It was led by Industry Minister Ernesto Guevara.

Tass, the Soviet news agency, said that delegations from every Communist-ruled nation except Albania would be represented. Khrushchev denounced the Albanians for their outspoken support of China's hard-line policies and the two nations severed relations.

There has been a surface easing of tension between Moscow and Peking since Khrushchev's ouster. Both sides recently exchanged friendly messages and neither has engaged in the public denunciations they exchanged frequently before the Kremlin shakeup.

However, Leonid I. Brezhnev, the new Soviet party chief, and Alexei N. Kosygin, the new premier, have shown no tendency to compromise on the major issues in dispute between the Soviet and Chinese parties. The new Kremlin leadership has said repeatedly it would continue Khrushchev's policy of peaceful coexistence with the capitalist world, seeking a further easing of world tensions. The Chinese bitterly oppose this policy.

Mars Exploration Trip Set for Robot Explorer

an adjoining launch pad. Its firing date, possibly as early as next week, will be determined after analysis of early results from Mariner 3.

Mariner project manager Jack N. James of NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory said there was a better than 50 per cent chance of obtaining significant data about Mars with the twin shots.

James said that the 138,000 parts in each Mariner would have to function for nine months in space; the craft must obey radio commands sent to them from earth stations, millions of miles away; and must be able to transmit photographs and scientific information from 150 million miles in space.

Key information sought is the density of the Martian atmosphere. Mariner 3 is supposed to collect it during a swift 60-second penetration of that atmosphere before skimming past the planet into orbit about the sun.

By studying changes in the strength of radio signals received during the brief period, experts hoped to pinpoint the thickness and pressure of the atmosphere.

If it is thick, future spacecraft might be able to land on the Martian surface with a parachute. If the air is thin, set-down rockets or other devices might have to be developed.

Mariner 3's television camera was designed to snap 22 pictures during a 30-minute period of near encounter. The spacecraft is equipped with magnetic tape to store the pictures to be transmitted to earth one or two times each during a 10 to 20-day period after the vehicle has passed Mars. Because of the extreme communication distance, nearly nine hours would be required to transmit one picture.

The photographs were expected to be 50 times the resolution of the best pictures obtainable from earth. Experts said objects a mile across might be defined clearly.

Throughout the interplanetary journey the spacecraft is set to radio valuable information about space radiation, cosmic dust, magnetic fields and other space properties.

Bolivian Battle Continues as President Flees

with the others, but Barrientos will doubtless try to become president one way or another."

Obando is commander of Bolivia's armed forces. He told the nation the junta will hold power as briefly as possible and will hold new elections.

Paz served as president until 1956, but the constitution barred his re-election. He was elected again in 1960 and changed the constitution to permit his re-election last May. Opposition parties boycotted the election and charged that the government stuffed the ballot boxes to get the 90 per cent vote which Paz claimed.

Paz also had been beset by deepening economic troubles and militant opposition from the tin miners' union led by his former vice president, leftist Juan Lechin.

Tin miners and students organized antigovernment demonstrations two weeks ago and at least 17 persons died before Paz' military restored control. Paz broke diplomatic relations with Communist Czechoslovakia, claiming its embassy in La Paz helped foment the disturbances.

The militia backed Paz throughout and with the national police put down a military uprising in La Paz Tuesday. But some of the police began to join the army rebels early Wednesday morning and a short time later Paz fled.

"I might stay here, I might go to Argentina," he said in Lima.

Bolivia's government has received $300 million in American aid during the past 12 years. In Washington, the State Department expressed hope the revolt would be settled peaceably and in a manner to provide "political stability within a constitutional framework." A spokesman said it was an internal Bolivian situation and too early for decisions on the future of U.S. aid programs.

Venezuelan President Raul Leoni, who opposes coup d'etat regimes, is expected to break relations with Bolivia. A government spokesman in Caracas said, "We will make an official announcement of our position when we receive our ambassador's confirmation of the overthrow of constitutional government."

Chilly Weather Reported in Many Areas

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Cooler air spread into north central sections of the nation today with more chilly weather in many areas in the Northeast and West.

Temperatures again dropped into the 20s and lower in the northern Plains, the Rockies and New England. The cool air was expected to extend from the eastern Great Lakes to Texas.

The arrival of cool air in north central areas followed several days of mild weather in many cities. Readings Wednesday included 74 in Alpena, Mich., 73 in Chicago and Lansing, Mich., and 71 in Detroit, record high marks for Nov. 4.

More heavy rain doused areas in Texas, including nearly three inches in the Houston area. The wet belt extended into Oklahoma. Earlier heavy rain drenched areas in Kansas.

state houses had been in Republican control.

The 17 governorships won by the Democrats Tuesday give them a total of 33 since they had 16 holdovers. The Republicans won eight of the races. They had nine holdovers, making their total 17. The pre-election lineup was 34 to 16.

Since all the races except for Arizona were in states carried by President Johnson over Sen. Barry Goldwater, the Republican victors in the races for governor displayed good tide-bucking ability.

Nowhere was this more clearly demonstrated than in Michigan where George Romney, who had refused to endorse Goldwater, easily defeated Rep. Neil Staebler, former Democratic national committeeman.

Romney's victory enhanced his standing in national GOP affairs. Some observers said he was almost certain to have a more important voice in molding the party's future course.

Utah elected a Democratic governor for the first time in 16 years when Calvin L. Rampton, Salt Lake City attorney, won over Mitchell Melich, former state legislator.

Victors included Gov. John B. Connally of Texas, close political associate of President Johnson, and losers Richard Kleindienst, who is close to Goldwater, in Arizona.

Connally, who was wounded last Nov. 22 when President John F. Kennedy was assassinated in Dallas, ran ahead of Johnson in winning a second term. Jack Crichton, Dallas oil man, was the loser.

While Goldwater carried his home state of Arizona, Kleindienst lost to Democrat Sam Goddard, Tucson attorney.

In Arkansas, Republican Winthrop Rockefeller, brother of New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller, gave Gov. Orval E. Faubus something of a scare. In the end Faubus pulled through by a substantial margin to win an unprecedented sixth two-year term.

While Volpe in Massachusetts was making his successful comeback, another former Republican governor, Cecil H. Underwood of West Virginia, failed in his. Underwood lost to Democrat Hulett C. Smith, state commerce commissioner.

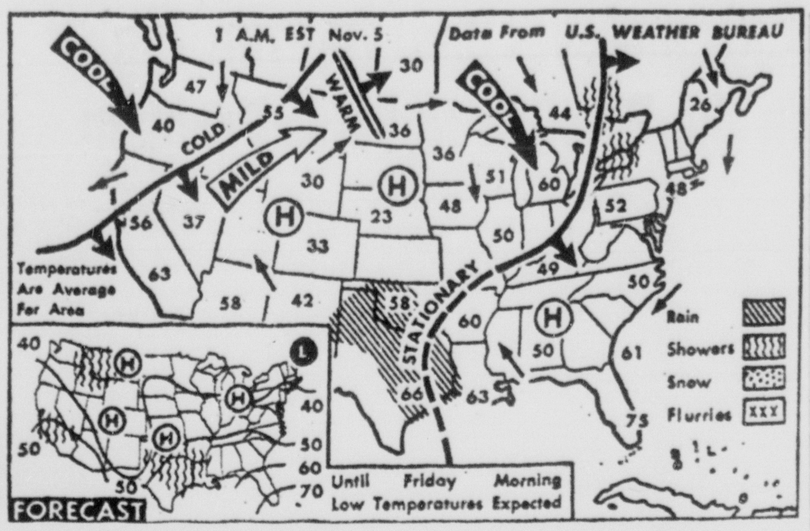
The other unseated Democratic governor, Rosellini in Washington, lost to Daniel Jackson Evans, a state legislator.



WEATHER BUREAU FORECAST — Showers are expected tonight along the southern and central Pacific coast, the Great Basin, the southern Plains and the lower Mississippi valley; mixed with snow flurries in the northern Rockies. Temperatures will be cooler in the lower Lakes, upper Ohio valley, western Gulf coast and Pacific northwest and milder in the north Atlantic states and from the central Plains to the upper Mississippi Valley. Car Damaged By Power Line

Isabel Rushing, 565 Catalina Dr., reported to the sheriff's department Wednesday that some live wires had been accidentally pulled off a power line and damaged the top of her car.

Deputy Sheriff Harry Orvis said that a truck driven by Charles Miller, 3165 W. Kiowa St., had failed to clear the power line at 510 Security Blvd. Miller said he had not realized the wires were so low that they could catch the top of his truck.

When the wires were pulled the fuse and meter box blew off the wall onto the hood of the Rushing vehicle causing $50 damage.

Common Market Political Unity Is Being Proposed

defense end education. These meetings would try to frame common policies.

Their work would be coordinated by a small secretariat of permanent officials representing the six nations as a whole but having little or no power of their own.

The European Parliament, which already exists, would discuss the policies the government leaders worked out, but would have no power to veto or modify them. Its members would continue to be appointed from the membership of the national parliaments and would not be elected directly.

It is not known whether De Gaulle will accept even as loose an organization as Erhard is proposing.

With his political proposal, Erhard sent economic proposals. Officials in Bonn have been secretive about these. It is not clear how directly they treat the chief problem between West Germany and the other Common Market countries — West Germany's high grain prices.

According to one report they urge speeding up of tariff reductions among the six member nations.

This idea is not especially welcome to De Gaule, and Erhard's proposals are likely to get a cool reception from him until West Germany makes some move on the grain price issue. This will have to come soon, since West Germany is committed to take a stand before Dec. 15.

The favorite proposal now circulating in Bonn is for the six members to agree on a series of hypothetical or fictitious prices. These prices would be lower than the German prices. The West German government would not be committed officially to accept them, but other countries could regard the list as an unspoken agreement to do so once next year's election is over in Germany and the government need not fear the farmers' wrath at the polls.

On the basis of these prices, it would be possible to calculate what West European grain production is likely to be in 1966 and thereafter. This would determine how much grain the United States would be able to sell in Western Europe, a vital point in the Kennedy round negotiations for tariff cuts.

Burned Toast Brings Out City Firemen

Companies 3 and 5 of the Colorado Springs Fire Department at 12:11 p.m. Wednesday went to a residence at 458 Glen View Court, when a slice of toast burned in a toaster. Some smoke accumulated in the house and the fire department was called. The firemen had no toast to save when they arrived, but fanned the smoke from the house.

At 9:20 p.m. Wednesday the resuscitator crew of Company 1 went to 736 E. High St., where A. L. Price, 74, of Batesville, Ark., was having difficulty in breathing. The firemen restored the patient to normal breathing by use of an inhalator.

McNamara Vetoed Viet Base Guard, Report Says

engagement" policy, formulated by Secretary of State Rusk, Assistant Secretary William Bundy, and his brother McGeorge Bundy, Special White House foreign affairs adviser, the employment of U. S. combat forces in South Viet Nam is limited to acting as advisers and trainers. They are barred from any other role.

This underlying procedure has the full approval of President Johnson.

Critical military authorities, particularly in the Air Force, attribute McNamara's rejection of Westmoreland's plan to another reason — determination to maintain tight control over U.S. combat forces abroad to avert incidents that might escalate into major clashes.

The Defense Secretary has long been under fire on the charge of iron-handed rule of the armed services. This latest backstage complaint is part of this criticism against him.

SUPPRESSED FACTS

Personnel and plane losses in the surprise Bien Hoa attack were much greater than officially admitted.

Casualties exceeded 300, a considerable number U. S. airmen.

Under the Rusk-McNamara "rules of engagement" policy, the eight major airbases in South Viet Nam are guarded by Air Force troops armed with only carbines and pearl-handled pistols. They have no infantry training, and are not equipped with heavy weapons, tanks or other arms to meet an artillery or large-scale attack such as the Viet Cong's hit-and-run blitz.

As a consequence, the Air Force guards were incapable of mounting a counter-attack.

These forces, numbering several thousand in South Viet Nam, are under orders not to fire unless fired on. This bars them from conducting probing patrols to ward off surprise attacks.

General Westmoreland is authoritatively understood to have stressed these dangerous shortcomings in urging the need for Marines or Army special forces to guard the eight key South Viet Nam airbases.

NEW WHITE HOUSE GUARD

A corps of crack marksmen drawn from all the armed services would be set up to guard the President and members of his family under a plan being considered by the special commission studying ways and means to improve such protection.

The military sharpshooters would have a special uniform, and be under officers trained and detailed for this service.

Another proposal before the commission, named by President Johnson following the publication of the voluminous report on the assassination of President Kennedy, calls for extensive reorganization of the Secret Service under which its functions would be limited to guarding the White House family.

This plan was submitted by Representative Silvio Conte, R-Mass., member of the House Appropriations Subcommittee which handles the Secret Service's budget. Conte would strip the Secret Service of all activities except protecting the President. Other investigative functions such as ferreting out counterfeiters, would be assigned to other agencies, among them the FBI.

The special commission, headed by Treasury Secretary Dillon, will make its recommendations to President Johnson in December. Other members are Acting Attorney General Nicholas deB. Katzenbach, Central Intelligence Director John McCone, and McGeorge Bundy, special White House foreign affairs adviser.

The group has had a number of meetings, but has reached no final decisions.

During the presidential campaign, the Secret Service and FBI investigated more than 100 threats and reports involving the President's life. In addition the FBI handled a number relating to Senator Goldwater.

Chief Justice Earl Warren, chairman of the special commission that investigated the Kennedy assassination, has been asked to address the December convention of the California Irrigation District Association on the subject of the Supreme Court's widely controversial legislative reapportionment decision.

Also invited to speak at the Los Angeles meeting is State Senator Edwin Regan, 16-year legislative veteran and chairman of the Judiciary Committee, who is critical of the tribunal's ruling.

"When the chief justice was governor of our state," says Regan, "he took an entirely different view. He was just as much opposed to any such scheme as most of us are today, and for the same good reason.

Demos Win Legislative Control in Several States

but the Republicans gained one in the Senate to boost their margin to 21-14. Officials of both parties said the GOP would have lost more except for the recent redistricting which it controlled.

Wisconsin — Democrats won the Assembly 52-48 and picked up two Senate seats to trim the GOP majority to 20-13. The Assembly had been 54-46 Republican.

Montana — The Democrats won control of the House for the first time since 1959, and retained control of the Senate for the third straight biennial session. Latest figures show Democratic margins of 31-24, one seat undetermined, in the Senate, and 54-23 in the House, two undetermined.

Wyoming — Democrats took the House 33-28, but the Republicans held a 13-12 margin in the Senate. The GOP had both houses 37-19 and 16-11 before reapportionment. The Democrats won every seat added by the 1963 redistricting.

North Dakota — Democrats won the reapportioned House 64-45 and picked up eight Senate seats to cut the GOP margin in the upper house to 29-20. The GOP had controlled the House 70-43.

California — The Democrats held their 27-13 majority in the Senate but will lose three or four of their 52-38 Assembly majority. The GOP Assembly gain is important because it takes two-thirds to pass a budget and some tax bills in California.

Springs Center Shows Student Response

There has been good response from prospective students to graduate courses next fall at the Colorado Springs Center of the University of Colorado, according to Donald King, administrator.

He will take a list of names to Boulder today of prospective students.

CU officials have announced, if there is sufficient interest, that courses will be offered next fall in business administration and electrical engineering, both at the graduate level, at the Cragmor Campus.

Local business, industrial and military organizations have pledged their support in finding graduate students.

King said Thursday he thought there was sufficient interest to possibly insure offering the graduate courses.

He said 158 persons have shown an interest in business courses, including 27 from Ft. Carson.

In engineering, King said, interest was shown by 38 persons, including seven from Ft. Carson.

The dean of the graduate school of business will meet Nov. 16 and 18 with prospective students.

CU officials say they hope students interested in graduate courses will register at the local center, 100 N. Nevada Ave., by this Saturday.

The Industrial Development of the Colorado Springs Chamber of Commerce has also been handling registrations. The registrations at this time are not final, and are designed only to survey the number of potential graduate students in the Pikes Peak region, according to CU officials.

Lists from the Chamber, including some duplications, were turned over to King's office Wednesday.

L.A. State Gets Second in Small College FB Poll

NEW YORK (UPI)—The Los Angeles State Diablos, a "small" college team in name only, vaulted into second place today in the United Press International small college football ratings. Wittenberg remained No. 1 for the third straight week.

Los Angeles State has enrollment of more than 19,000 students (three times as many as Notre Dame, the major college leader, and larger than eight Big 10 conference universities) and plays its home games in the 100,000-seat capacity Rose Bowl.

The Diablos, who have a perfect 5-0 record, crushed Cal Poly at Pomona 55-6 Saturday and advanced from fourth place to runnerup with six first-place votes and 214 points. Wittenberg, which stretched its unbeaten streak to 29 games with a 40-7 victory over Ohio Wesleyan, received 20 first-place ballots and 278 points from the 35 coaches on the UPI rating board.

The NCAA determines whether a college rates as "major" or "small"—not on the basis of enrollment, but primarily on the number of major college opponents a team plays. A college must play at least half its games against major college opposition to qualify for the higher level.

Dark May Join Cubs as Coach

CHICAGO (AP) — Al Dark, fired as manager of the San Francisco Giants, may join the Chicago Cubs next year as a coach, Owner P. K. Wrigley indicated Tuesday.

Wrigley, denying an extensive shakeup in the Cubs' operations may be in the making, said:

Dark has been in touch with us. However, if he should return to the Cubs it would be as coach. We would like to have him but he's still looking for a manager's job elsewhere."

Burned Toast Brings Out City Firemen

Companies 3 and 5 of the Colorado Springs Fire Department at 12:11 p.m. Wednesday went to a residence at 458 Glen View Court, when a slice of toast burned in a toaster. Some smoke accumulated in the house and the fire department was called. The firemen had no toast to save when they arrived, but fanned the smoke from the house.

At 9:20 p.m. Wednesday the resuscitator crew of Company 1 went to 736 E. High St., where A. L. Price, 74, of Batesville, Ark., was having difficulty in breathing. The firemen restored the patient to normal breathing by use of an inhalator.

Once-Ferocious Fighters Find Farm Peaceful

By RICHARD DAW

CIUDAD ORBREGON, Mexico (AP)—The fierce Yaqui Indians once among this hemisphere's most feared warriors, are taking giant strides toward becoming peaceful cowboys and farmers.

Officially at peace with the Mexican government only since 1937, about 9,700 Yaquis today live quietly on 1,136,000 acres of land near this agricultural city Sonora state.

Bronze-skinned and taciturn, they farm, raise cattle, maintain many of their tribal customs and look askance at prying outsiders.

Thousands of persons have seen a tribal Yaqui dance, the dance of the deer, at performances of Mexico's world-traveling National Folklore Ballet, but few see it performed by the Yaquis themselves.

"These things are sacred, and not for idle, curious eyes," says a wizened Yaqui leader in turning away visitors.

The Indian's finality in guarding tribal customs stems from the same resoluteness with which they withstood the assaults of Spanish and Mexican invaders for 400 years.

Convinced that the Yaquis never could be subdued by force, Mexicas President Lazaro Cardenas gave official recognition in 1937 to their right to the land on which they now live.

The Yaquis still are ruled by tribal laws and Mexican authorities tactfully avoid pressing them into any conflict with Mexican law.

The Mexican government does, however, take an active hand in the tribe's economic affairs.

A branch of the National Bank of Agricultural Credit operates in the tribe's territory and its agricultural experts offer technical aid.

About $3.2 million a year is provided in credits for farming 49,420 acres and caring for 10,000 head of cattle.

One of the bank's technical experts, Jose Simos Nava Gomez, says the Yaquis are adapting well to the farm life and are beginning to see the logic in cattle-raising.

"We had a problem with the cattle at first," he says. "The Yaquis' way of thinking doesn't involve much planning for the future, and when we first put cattle into the region, the Indians' first instinct was to slaughter them, divide the meat and have a feast.

"We finally convinced them that if they'd fatten the cattle up and sell them, they'd make enough money to buy a lot more meat.

"It took some talking, but now we can let cattle run free without worrying too much about anybody suddenly deciding he'll eat one."

Negroes Win Seats in Five Legislatures

By PHILIP J. MCGUIRE

CHICAGO (AP) — Negroes won seats in four state legislatures for the first time in Tuesday's elections and scored gains in other state and local contests, an Associated Press survey shows.

They also gained at least 10 seats in legislatures of 10 states where Negroes had previously served.

There were also these firsts:

Tennessee — First Negro member of the General Assembly since the Reconstruction era after the Civil War.

Colorado — First Negro district judge.

Alabama — First Negroes elected to four county offices in Macon County.

The highest ranking Negro seeking re-election, Republican Atty. Gen. Edward W. Brooke of Massachusetts, piled up a 2-1 margin over Democratic State Sen. James W. Hennigan, who is white.

Brooke did not endorse Republican Barry Goldwater for president.

Most of the winning Negroes ran as Democrats, some as independents.

Negroes elected to state legislatures that had been all-white included:

—Two members of the Iowa House of Representatives.

—A state senator in Delaware and one in Kansas.

—Three members of the Oklahoma House of Representatives.

Taking seats for the first time in the Iowa Legislature will be Mrs. Willie Stevenson Glanton of Des Moines and James Jackson of Waterloo. Both are Democrats.

Herman N. Holloway, former state representative, became the first Negro elected to Delaware's Senate. He is from Wilmington and a Democrat.

In Oklahoma, E. Melvin Porter, an official of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People in Oklahoma City, won a seat in the state Senate, while John B. White, Archibald Hill and Curtis L. Lawton were elected to the House of Representatives. Lawton is from Tulsa, and the other two from Oklahoma City. Both cities received increased representation in the legislature after reapportionment this fall.

A. W. Willis, a Memphis, Tenn., lawyer who had represented James Meredith in his legal battle to enter the University of Mississippi, was elected to the Tennessee Assembly.

In New Jersey, the Rev. S. Howard Woodson Jr., will represent Mercer County (Trenton) in the Assembly. The Rev. Mr. Woodson, a former member of the Trenton City Council won by about 5,000 votes, one-tenth of President Johnson's margin in the county.

James C. Flanigan trailed three other candidates, but captured the last of four vacancies for the post of district court judge in Colorado. He ousted a Republican incumbent in the eight-man race.

In Macon County, Ala., Dr. Charles Gomillion was elected to the county Board of Education. William C. Allen and William Childs won justice of the peace posts, and the Rev. V. A. Edwadrs. won a seat on the Board of Revenue, governing body of the county. Negroes outnumber whites in the county, but four other Negro candidates were defeated by Democrats. Most of the Negroes ran as independents.

Negroes also picked up more seats in legislatures in Indiana, Oklahoma, Georgia, California, New York and Massachusetts. They also re-elected incumbents in Wasnington, Ohio, Arizona and Nebraska.

CHIEF WINS BATTLE OVER UKE LESSONS

HONOLULU (AP)—There was a tug o'war this summer between Maui county's board of supervisors and the island's police chief.

The supervisors hired Edward B. Wilson to teach children how to play the ukelele in the park department's summer fun program.

But Wilson was a fulltime policeman and his chief, Jean R. Lane, said he was of more value to the island on the police force than he was giving ukelele instruction.

Lane eventually won. He pointed out that the county owed Wilson 48 hours overtime—at captain's pay—for teaching the uke.

Congo Recaptures Rebel Stronghold

ELISABETHVILLE, the Congo (AP) — Congolese army headquarters in Elisabethville today reported government troops have recaptured Kibombo, an important rebel stronghold in the Maniema district, 80 miles south of Kindu.

The army's 5th Brigade headquarters reported from Kibombo that the town fell without resistance Wednesday.

Three Belgian settlers were found dying. A fourth Belgian was reported missing.

WORRY CLINIC

By George W. Crane, M.D., Ph.D.

Harry offers his side of the marital feud, so paste it in your scrapbook. And be suspicious of people who call me a "sex maniac" just because I expose their own mistakes. For I'm no more a sex maniac than a medic is a "surgical maniac" for removing a woman's womb via a hysterectomy!

By GEORGE W. CRANE
Ph. D., M. D.

CASE U-422: Harry B., aged 43, is the husband of Beth who felt that happy marriage can be maintained solely on an ethereal plane of music, art and poetry.

"Dr. Crane," Harry began, "you are quite right in saying I would much prefer an affair with my wife instead of my paramour.

"And I think that is usually true of husbands in the same boat with me.

"But Beth was reared in a prudish home where sex was an unmentionable word.

"When we first married, she insisted on twin beds, probably because she had derived the idea from watching movies.

"And she was always reluctant about the physical side of marriage.

"During our first 15 years, I was sufficiently energetic and ardent that I could put up with such diffidence.

"But after I reached 40, I found it difficult to furnish the entire 100 per cent of the love making.

"Meanwhile, I got a new secretary who is seductive and interested.

"While Beth was away at a poetry clinic at the state university, I took my secretary to dinner and the theater.

"She was warm and ardent and picked up her cues instead of acting bored, indifferent or aggreieved.

"So our affair got started that night and has continued ever since.

"However, I tried to break off, out of a sense of duty to Beth. But when I tried to get Beth interested, she told me to act my age!

"Beth is 38 and I am afraid too set in her purdish ways to change.

"But, Dr. Crane, if you could work a miracle and persuade her to meet me even half way, I'd still give up my paramour.

"For husbands really prefer their wives to other females or they would never have married them in the first place.

"But I doubt if Beth will ever change."

Readers, Beth would probably scream that her husband is a beast and 100 per cent to blame, if she consciously faced these facts.

But how would you render your verdict?

Wives are usually 50 per cent to blame for divorce even though, like Beth, they may vigorously insist that their husbands are 100 per cent at fault.

And it is usually these 100 per cent self-righteous wives who protest most violently against this clinical column.

But look at the facts and don't grow so emotional.

Just because I happen to expose the frank medical and psychological facts about Beth and Harry, doesn't make me a sex maniac, does it?

Because a surgeon points out a woman's need for hysterectomy, does that make him a "surgical maniac?"

If a dentist diagnoses an abscessed tooth and extracts it for Beth, should she accuse him of being a "dental maniac?"

Will you readers PLEASE learn to be scientific and face facts?"

This is a dissecting clinic in human behavior so don't scream at me if I happen to probe a sore spot in your own marriage or personality!

Send for my booklet "Sex Differences Between Men and Women," enclosing a long, stamped, return envelope, plus 20 cents.

(Always write to Dr. Crane in care of this newspaper, enclosing a long stamped, addressed envelope and 20 cents to cover typing and printing costs when you send for one of his booklets.)

Lone Republican Gallops to Vote Victory in Texas

By BOB HORTON

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Frank Cahoon gallops into the Texas Legislature next January, the lone Republican among 180 Democrats.

"This is my first office," the Midland, Tex., oilman said rather wistfully. "Those guys will distracize me."

Cahoon didn't plan to take on the whole Democratic herd when he decided to bid for election a few months ago.

But the big election stampede of President Johnson cleared the state legislative corral of five GOP incumbents from Dallas County, and Cahoon was on his own.

Only once before was the Republican delegation a minority of one in the state house. That was in 1951 when a single Republican won a seat from Dallas County.

Cahoon's reason for leaving a big Democratic majority isn't hard to figure. Being an independent oil operator with several wells around West Texas, he wanted to be sure someone protected the petroleum industry at the Capitol.

His narrow victory over Democrat Harry Lawson may have bolstered family pride.

The folks haven't been able to forget that in 1932 Cahoon's uncle, Orville Bullington, lost the Texas governor's race to colorful Ma Ferguson by some 210,000 votes.

A better known political figure connected to the Cahoon family is Sen. John Tower, Texas' Republican member in the upper chamber in Washington.

Tower married a niece of Cahoon's uncle — Bullington — which, Cahoon figures, makes Cahoon and the senator second cousins by marriage. Or something. Let those 180 Democrats figure that one, he says.

How does Cahoon plan to coexist with his massive Democratic opposition?

"The Texas House is fairly conservative," he says. "I'll probably fall in with the most conservative bloc of Democrats, and hold my own."

Cahoon is particularly interested in seeing that the petroleum-rich and conservative-minded Midland-Odessa area isn't split off into separate congressional districts when the legislature undertakes its court-ordered reapportionment task.

"The Democrats would like to weaken our conservative strength," he says.

"I've got definite ideas about government, and one of them is taintaining the two-party system," Cahoon told a newsman.

"Come to think of it," he reflected. "I make the two-party system in Texas."

Marine Nabbed In Slaying of New York Girl

By RICHARD F. WHALEN

NEW YORK (AP) — A curtain hook that fell behind a radiator in a hotel room has produced the clue that led to the arrest of a Marine sergeant in the sniper slaying of a girl on June 22.

Sgt. Roy F. Nagle, was seized Wednesday outside a relative's home in Queens and later was charged with homicide.

The victim, Joan Wilson, 18, was shot at 1 a.m. as she talked with a friend in a Times Square area parking lot near her home.

Four months of intensive investigation produced no fruitful clue. Scores of detectives worked on the case. They interviewed more than 1,000 persons.

Then, last Sunday, Cleveland Washington, 44, a porter at the Holland Hotel, next to the parking lot, was hanging curtains at the window of Room 810. He dropped a curtain hook.

"It fell behind the radiator," he said. "I got down to look for it and I saw this box under the radiator against the wall. It had bullets in it. Then I saw the gun."

Police said they traced the gun to its original owenr, who had bought it from the factory, then to another man and finally to Nagle.

Nagle is assigned to the Marine Corps Air Squadron at Cherry Point, N.C. He has been a Marine for 8½ years.

Police declined to give details of the shooting or a possible motive.

Miss Wilson was shot in the head. Detectives plotted the course of the bullet and determined that it was probably shot from the eighth floor of the Holland Hotel. They searched the hotel and questioned the occupants and employes.

They said that the room where the gun turned up was on the opposite side of the hotel from the parking lot and that the shot was fired from a fire escape.

Nagle, they said, had stayed in the room, having registered at the hotel under a fictitious name. They declined to elaborate.

Neo-Nazi Arrested By German Officials

BAMBERG, Germany (AP) — Wolfgang Kirschstein was charged today with illegally importing neo-Nazi literature from the United States and Sweden and with stirring racial hatred.

Kirschstein, a 26-year-old clerk, used the pen name of "Wodan the Freedom Fighter" as a contributor to a U.S. magazine titled "The International Nazi Fascist." In his article he allegedly glorified Adolf Hitler and called for the extermination of the Jewish race.

Generals of Russia Follow Old 'Hard Line'

By LEON DENNEN

NEW YORK (NEA)—The poli- y of Russia's rising marshals nd generals on East-West re- ations is clearly revealed in a tudy of "American imperial- sm" printed recently in Kras- aya Zvezda, the Red Army's fficial newspaper.

Entitled "The Military Doc- rines of Imperialism," the arti- le was written by Col. Gen. M. Povalyi, one of Russia's top trategists. It is an amazingly rank document for the usually ecretive Red Army. It wastes io words on peaceful co-exis- ence and pulls no punches in its ttack on the "United States ggressors." General Povalyi rote:

"World reaction headed by Jnited States monopolists is aking a course aimed at re- aining the ascendency of cap- talism all over the world by new war.

"The imperialists are fever- shly seeking a fool - proof cheme to attain a quick and elatively safe military vic- ory."

The Soviet general urged the army to pay close attention to the "machination of the Amer- ican aggressors" in order "to asess better the character of U.S. military preparations and to resolve more purposefully to strengthen the combat readi- ness of the Red Army."

In General Povalyi's view, the United States is directly responsible for the war in Ko- rea in 1950 and "America is the organizer of almost all military provocations which have taken place in the Middle East, Afri- ca and in the area of the Carib- bean Sea."

The United States is also waging "a dirty war in Viet Nam and American forces are deployed in groupings which threaten all peace - loving states."

The Soviet general, obviously in an effort to woo Mao Tse- tung, even intimated that the United States has aggressive designs on Red China. He charged, among other things, that "in the Pacific Ocean, the U.S. Seventh Fleet is held in full readiness for aggressive ac- tion against the socialist coun- tries in the Far East and South- east Asia."

Povalyi held out little hope for lasting friendly relations be- tween the "imperialist" West and the "peace-loving" East.

He emphasized that the "re- actionary and clearly aggres- sive character of the American military doctrine stems from the entire course of United States foreign policy." This military doctrine, he concluded, "cannot undergo any essential change because the nature of American imperialism remains un- changed."

Did Col. Gen. Povalyi speak for the Soviet general staff? The fact that his anti-American diatribe was displayed on the eve of Khrushchev's fall strengthens the belief that he expressed the view of a power- ful group in the Red Army. The article was the military's coun- terattack on Khrushchev's pol- icy of peaceful co-existence.

The new Soviet chief Leonid Brezhnev and his "collective" co-leaders in the Kremlin may or may not be sincere when they continue to talk about dis- armament and friendly rela- tions with the West. But it is increasingly clear that a pha- lanx of square-jawed Red mar- shals and generals supports a hard line against NATO and the United States.

Barry Finished As GOP Chief, Rocky Thinks

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller indicated today that he considers Sen. Barry Goldwater's leadership of the Republican party finished.

Asked whether the defeated presidential candidate should continue to lead the party, New York's Republican governor said: "That has been sufficient- ly answered in the elections."

He told newsmen it is abso- lutely necessary to "revitalize the Republican party in the state." He said he had already begun such an effort in New York.

Rockefeller and his wife ar- rived from New York today for a week's vacation in Spain.

The Rockefellers were accom- panied by Mr. and Mrs. George Hinman of Binghamton, N.Y. Hinman, a Republican national committeeman, was once the governor's executive assistant.

Cambodia Dissolves Boy Scout Groups

TOKYO (AP) — Cambodia's Boy Scouts Association has been dissolved after the chief of state, Prince Norodom Siha- nouk, charged the scout move- ment was linked with "our deadly enemies," Communist China's New China News Agen- cy said today.

Sihanouk in a radio speech Nov. 1 barred the Boy Scouts from Cambodia's Independence Day parade on Nov. 9, the Com- munist agency said.

The prince said the scout government originated in a country of the free world — Britain — and "belongs to the camp of our deadly enemies to- day, who have murdered our compatriots and tried all means to attack us."

Romney Faces High Hopes In GOP Plans

By DICK BARNES

DETROIT (AP) — While talk of the 1968 presidential nomina- tion and Republican rebuilding flutters around Michigan Gov. George Romney, he faces a home-state challenge that could make or break his national future before he even considers it.

Romney won overwhelming re-election Tuesday despite a Michigan landslide for Presi- dent Johnson and found himself at the fore of GOP survivors.

He also found himself con- fronted with a state legislature of nearly two-thirds Democrats in each house — a jarring shift from the Republican majorities of Romney's first term.

The silver-haired former American Motors Corp. presi- dent said the Republican party must "broaden and unify." At the same time, Romney seem- ingly must broaden and unify his own administration program even beyond party bounds to have a chance for a successful second-term record.

He said he would work on a bipartisan basis and hoped for reciprocity. The beaten Demo- cratic gubernatorial candidate, Neil Staebler, talked of coopera- tion.

The governor insisted that he has not considered seeking the 1968 nomination. He said a draft was "a very presumptuous thing to discuss."

In regard to national party rebuilding, he told a news con- ference Wednesday that he "can't see that I have any sig- nificant individual responsibility

"I do recognize that with others throughout the nation I can make contributions to broad- en and unify the party national- ly."

Practically speaking, Rom- ney, 57, will have to decide what to do in 1966 before looking be- yond. He could seek another term as governor — one of four years under a new constitution- al provision — or he might try for Democratic Sen. Patrick Mc- Namara's seat.

His success with the legisla- ture could affect this choice.

Romney said he is not ready to read Goldwater or any of the senator's aides out of the Re- publican organization because "you don't broaden the party by kicking people out." Romney withheld endorsement from Goldwater during the campaign.

The governor said more than one person must undertake the party broadening but observed, "I have no way of knowing what Sen. Goldwater's approach would be at this time."

He suggested the Republican Governors' Conference as a group qualified to build grass- roots sentiment.

Again and again as he refused to perform a campaign post- mortem, Romney returned to his theme: The party must be broadened and unified. At this time he is willing to help but not lead nationally on a personal basis.

New Republican Leadership Is Being Urged

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — The chairman of the Republican Governors Association, Idaho Gov. Robert E. Smylie, said Wednesday the party must find new leadership and move to- ward a more moderate course in the wake of Tuesday's elec- tion.

He suggested the leadership should come from the Republi- can governors and said the association will meet sometime before Dec. 1 and discuss the questions of leadership and the party's future.

Smylie said the meeting had been arranged before the elec- tion, which brought overwhelm- ing defeat to Republican presi- dential nominee Barry Gold- water.

But he added: "It would be impossible to keep such a meet- ing out of the questions of where should the party go, and its leadership."

Smylie declined comment on suggestions that he might be- come a successor of National GOP Chairman Dean Burch.

But he said he feels that "grass roots" leadership from the statehouses and the court- houses will have to take over within the part. He said the governors should have a greater voice in part police and organ- ization.

Alliance Progress Planning Proposed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Asst. Secretary of State Thomas C. Mann says it is necessary "to sacrifice short-term political advantages and personal gain" in order to lay "solid and endur- ing foundations" for the Al- liance for Progress.

Mann who is U.S. coordinator of the U.S.-supported program for Latin America, said in a speech Wednesday that there is a great temptation to look for quick answers in seeking to speed social reform in Central and South America.

He noted that there is disa- greement over whether to con- centrate on social projects or programs, on economic develop- ment or on political problems.

"I would like to suggest that political, social and economic progress are in fact of one piece — they are indivisible," Mann said. He spoke to the Interna- tional Council of B'nai B'rith.

HINTS FROM Heloise

By HELOISE CRUSE

Dear Heloise:

Just how does one get "really sour", sour pickles today" Please answer as our whole family are sour bugs! —"Pickles"

I have checked with a top pickle man in the business and he gave me his terrific special recipe that I will share with you. And, gals, these are really sour, so watch your step before you bite off too big a chunk!

Buy processed (read fine print on bottle) or genuine dill pickles and pour off the juice.

Slice the pickles any shape you wish . . . crosswise, or lengthwise, in thin slices or stick-style.

Put pickles back in the jar and fill the jar with distilled "white" vinegar (and be sure it's 5 per cent!).

Put the top back on the bottle and set it on your drainboard for three days. After that the pickles will "have" to be kept under refrigeration. This means keep them in your refrig at all times.

Wow! Talk about a sour pickle . . . It's great! —Sour Pickle

Dear Heloise:

I go to a school where it is necessary to wear a uniform skirt and blouse. Most of us have trouble with the blouse pulling out of the skirt.

Then someone got the bright idea of putting a button on the skirt inside the waistband, and a buttonhole on the blouse.

By buttoning the skirt onto the blouse the blouse stays put all day. Certainly makes for a neater appearance, and we are much happier, too, as we don't have to be tugging and fussing with our blouses all day. —Teresa Foley

Dear Heloise:

When the snow and rain season is in full bloom, the front door seemed an endless mess of boots and rubbers until I solved the problem by putting a plastic clothes basket, lined with a plastic bag, by the front door. Now my rugs stay cleaner and there's no rushing around searching for boots and rubbers before school time.

I also use the same kind of baskets for my youngest son's toys. —Mrs. Dolores Lamania

Dear Heloise:

I would like to improve on the idea carrying police emergency phone numbers in your purse:

Why not write the numbers on a piece of thin cardboard, and tape a dime on the back of the card? How many times have you had to ask for change to make an urgent phone call? Perhaps you might be in a place where change is not available.

This way there will be no frantic searching for change. —Mrs. G. Sotelo

Letter Of Laughter

Dear Heloise:

I use liquid wax on the stove top, refrigerator, tile back and top of sink, tile windowsills and cupboard doors. Presto! A soft cloth eliminates finger marks, spills and what - have - you in nothing flat!

I wax almost everything but my husband, who has been shining (for me) for 52 years. —A. A. B.

Dear Heloise:

In regard to trouble with electricity in the rugs—the shocking truth is too low humidity in the home. An inexpensive electric moisturizer or a humidifier will eliminate these shocks.

Boiling water in an open kettle for several hours will also correct the problem.

Thank you for your column and many hints and help. —Walter Mengal

Dear Heloise:

We have aluminum, combination-storm doors on our home and we find it best to put the glass in the lower section and the screen above.

Tempest in Coffee Pot Brews on Martial Scene

By ERNEST SAKLER

TURIN, Italy (UPI) — The sacred right of Italian husbands to have their breakfast served in bed is not threatened — that is, if letters pouring into a leading Italian newspaper office are an accurate sample of wives' opinion.

The controversy over whether wives should serve husbands breakfast in bed started when an unidentified woman from Bolzano wrote an indignant letter to the Turin newspaper, La Stampa.

The woman said that although the Italian breakfast is generally confined to a cup of black coffee, serving it in bed gives husbands tyrannical habits.

"I have been married 14 years and I lost my mother 12 years ago, but I still very often remember her words to me when I went to visit her on the return from my honeymoon," the Bolzano woman wrote.

"I, an eager and loving bride, took coffee to my husband in bed, I had everything ready for him. In short, I served him. My mother said: 'Don't pamper him this way, or you will have to do the same throughout your lifetime.'

"She was right. Now I would like to give this advice to girls about to get married:

"Don't serve your husbands, never, not even during your honeymoon. You'll avoid becoming their servants for life."

La Stampa editors published that letter and admitted later that they expected an avalanche of letters of support for the Bolzano lady, a sort of "wives of the world, unite," call.

The avalanche of letters did come. But all of the letters were flatly in disagreement.

"The cup of coffee renews every morning the link of affection between husband and wife," a woman from Turin wrote. "One should not teach young brides to consider kind gestures and loving care toward the partners of their lives as humiliating, but rather repeat to them that the happiness and harmony of the family are made of little things."

A worker's wife and mother of four wrote she had been married 13 years and was serving her husband coffee in bed.

"Not because he orders me to, but because I feel it is my duty to do so," she said.

"My dear lady, did you ever look your husband in the face when he comes back from work," this woman asked.

"I don't know what his job is, but mine is a worker. When he comes home from the factory, he is benumbed by fatigue. If he works the early shift, he must get up at 4:30 a.m. Why shouldn't I take him his coffee in bed, giving him the chance to rest for 10 more minutes?

"I have been sick and the same care I have for him, my husband has had for me."

Other women wrote to assure the Bolzano wife that they were serving their husbands breakfast in bed and "I don't in the least feel a servant" or "I can assure you, he never considered sure you, he never considered me a servant."

"Lady from Bolzano," a widow wrote, "you can safely take the cup of coffee to your husband. You can take him also the newspaper. This does not mean to serve him. It simply is to show him love and affection. I unfortunately can no longer do it."

A number of women and men expressed the feeling that if the husband of the Bolzano lady was tyrannical, he was an unfortunate exception — and that he would have been the same, coffee habit or no coffee habit.

"Is it possible that there are husbands who treat their wives like servants," one man wrote.

"My dear lady, if you husband is one of those, tell him to leave you alone. Also, my wife serves me coffee in bed and, I confess to you, this pleases me a lot. But when I am on vacation, I serve her coffee so she can rest."

If any husband or wife anywhere in Italy agreed with the Bolzano lady, he or she did not write La Stampa.

Lincoln Center Actors Too Old For Spanking

By JOAN CROSBY

NEW YORK (NEA) — The Repertory Theater of Lincoln Center, administered several harsh spankings during its infant year, now faces its second secure in the knowledge that no matter what it attempts, it is now too old for spanking. Instead it will get a rap in the nose.

As proof that you can't please some of the people any of the time, hear this.

When the Theater's directors, Elia Kazan and Robert Whitehead, announced two of its plays this season would be the 17th century classics, "The Changeling" and a new adaptation of "Tartuffe," a flood of mail poured into their offices.

They were denounced for taking refuge in old works, when a repertory company's primary responsibility was to present exciting new works.

When a later announcement was made that a third play in repertory this season would be Arthur Miller's new "Incident at Vichy," another flood of mail poured in. This denounced Kazan and Whitehead for betraying the true mission of repertory: keeping the classics alive.

This inability to please more than 50 per cent of the people is not confined to New York. Heads of the various repertory companies which have sprung up all across the United States have discovered there is no way to keep everyone happy.

In New York, there was the added hazard of comedians who made jokes about the company in night club acts. One said, "They have one play, 'After the Fall' in repertory. It's alternating with itself."

Whitehead answers criticism with the claim that repertory theater must operate as a company able to present both classics and new plays. "Each feeds on the other, enriches the other, and enriches the range of the company," he said, sitting in his elegant penthouse offices with a garden, geraniums, gazebo and superb view of New York.

He defends playing only "After the Fall" during the summer on the grounds that the subscription season was over. "There was a lot of comment about it, but the other two plays, 'But For Whom Charlie' and 'Marco Millions' had exhausted their audience. If we had kept them in repertory during the summer months, 'Fall' would have played to capacity houses, and the others to audiences of two people."

Until the Repertory Theater moves to its permanent home in Lincoln Center For The Performing Arts next season, it is committed to playing 50 weeks a year primarily as financial aid to the builders of the theater they are temporarily occupying. Once it moves to Lincoln Center, it will be a true repertory company, playing only about 35 weeks of the year.

With a fourth play, as yet unselected, due to be added to the three already announced, and "After the Fall" retained, the Repertory Theater will have five plays in repertory by February. It opens the season on October 29, with "The Changeling."

Time, Whitehead believes, is the most valuable asset for a repertory company. "We could do a series of productions with stars brought in from outside our company, and we might be acclaimed, but that would get us nowhere. We must achieve continuity."

The actors are achieving, Whitehead says, a flavor for ensemble playing, a flavor distinctly their own. "We are being criticized up here," he said, holding a hand head high, "and we are playing here" and he brought his hand down to waist level. "Criticizing us last year was like looking at a 3-hour-old baby and saying, 'It's no good, it's a bust.'"

Another criticism directed at the company concerned the fact that some of the leading actors appeared in bit parts in "After the Fall" on opening night, but didn't appear again. It is true to an extent, but Whitehead's belief is that a leading actor in a bit part is a serious audience distraction. David Wayne did a walk-on in "After the Fall" because he wanted to appear in the opening production. The audience whispered his name when he appeared, and by the time the whispering was over, Wayne was off stage.

The company consists of about 25 actors who are signed on a long - term basis — "it's much too small a company"—with others brought in to fill roles as needed. Jason Robards Jr. is on a leave of absence this season, and Ralph Meeker has left. Otherwise, the group is intact.

Approximately 70 per cent of the available seats are being sold this season on subscription.

Dear Abby--

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Tale's End

DEAR ABBY: We were high school sweethearts, but he went away to college and then married an out-of-town girl. In the meantime, I married someone else, too. After many dull years, I filed for divorce. I had no children, thank heavens. Fate brought him back to visit his parents this summer, and it was just like old times. He is more handsome than ever. He had his two teen-aged sons with him and I loved them immediately. There was nothing out of the way—just good, clean fun. Besides, we were with our parents most of the time. He told me he wasn't happy with his wife, but will not divorce her because of the boys. When they went home, the boys started to correspond with me, but their mother put a stop to it. How narrow-minded can you get? Don't you think children have a right to choose their own friends? How can I set her straight? —HOME TOWN SWEETHEART

DEAR SWEETHEART: You can't "set her straight" so don't try. She considers you a threat, with good reason. This is not simply a matter of children "choosing their own friends." If you "love" the boys, and it was actually all "just good, clean fun," write finis to the chapter and close the book.

DEAR ABBY: I have a weak muscle (or nerve) in one eye and it makes me look cross-eyed. A local eye doctor said it was too slight to correct surgically for cosmetic reasons, but it is driving me out of my mind, Abby. I can't look at anybody any more. When I ask my family how bad they think it is, they say they don't even notice it. But I know they just don't want to tell me the truth because they are afraid of hurting my feelings. Maybe THEY can't notice it, but when a small child asks you WHO you are looking at when you are looking directly at HIM, something must be wrong. How can I get the truth? —NEEDS TO KNOW

DEAR NEEDS: Ask a few people on whom you can rely to tell you the truth. Then go to another doctor and ask him. Even though the eye is only slightly off, if it bothers you excessively, perhaps surgery should be performed for your peace of mind, which is every bit as important as for cosmetic reasons.

DEAR ABBY: What do you think of a man who will eat the outside of a cake and the inside of a pie, and leave the less desirable parts for his family? —JUST WONDERING

DEAR JUST: I think he is a gluttonous galoot. And if he's yours, you have my sympathy.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "Edna": "It takes an enemy and a friend, working together to hurt you to the heart. The one to slander you, and the other to get the news to you." —(Mark Twain)

FALL COLOR INDOORS

Rivaling the blazing hues of autumn, mums will last indoors for weeks if treated well. Kept out of direct sunlight except in the early morning and afternoon, mums also prefer an evenly moist soil. This is best maintained by keeping the plants in clay pots which will leach out excess water through the sides.

Cook's Tour

By JEANNE LESEM
United Press International

NEW YORK (UPI) — Herring meant as Lenten fare for English soldiers in France in 1429 ended up on the firing line instead and added "the battle of the herrings" to history.

The barrels of herring became part of a barricade behind which the English successfully fought off the enemy at Rouvray, near Orleans, during the Hundred Years War, says the Herring Council. Their victory was short - lived. The French led by Joan of Arc eventually routed the English.

"The battle of the herrings" was just one of many instances in which that variety of fish has made history, says the council, which represents more than 90 per cent of the United States herring industry.

The council added that the fish also were vital to the Hanseatic League, a medieval organization of German merchants which monopolized the herring industry of its time. Lubeck merchants even carved herring on church pews in recognition of the fishes' importance and Hollanders have said that Amsterdam, their capital, was "built upon herrings."

At least one historian has suggested that herring migrations were responsible for Viking migrations, since those Northmen of the eighth to tenth centuries lived chiefly on fish. Iceland, where Viking sagas were written, today catches, eats and sells more herring and other fish than any other nation. But even the United States now consumes 100,000 pounds of herring annually.

There are dozens of ways of preparing and serving herring, mostly from ready-to-serve, glass-packed fish. But there are only three basic types — matjes, schmaltz and Bismarck. Matjes, from a Dutch word, meaning maiden, come from the first or maiden catch of the season. They are given a mild cure with sugar, salt, vinegar, spices and sandalwood, which imparts the characteristic reddish color.

But "red herring," as slang, refers not to matjes, but to a lightly salted, smoked variety called bloaters, a breakfast dish to the British. The term is synonymous with a device to divert attention. It supposedly originated in early fox hunting days, when a red herring dragged across the fox's trail diverted the hunting dogs from it.

Schmaltz, from the German word for fat, is caught at the start of the mating cycle, and is cured with either sugar or salt and sharper spices and more vinegar than are used for other varieties. Schmaltz herring has a stronger flavor than matjes or Bismarck and usually is packed in wine sauce.

Bismarck is cured with skin on, in strong vinegar, and has a distinctively sharp flavor.

A Dutch proverb says that "a herring a day keeps the doctor away" and many a Hollander apparently supports this theory, especially when the first catch of the spring arrives in the Netherlands. It's called green herring and is eaten raw, with chopped onions. But the Dutch also like fried herrings with red cabbage. Herring plain, in wine or other sauces and in salads is essential to Scandinavian buffets. Eating etiquette for Swedish smorgasbord requires that the first course consist solely of herring.

Finnish sillisalaatti is typical of northern European herring salads. It contains pickled herring, cooked beets and carrots, boiled potatoes, raw cucumbers, celery and apples, capers hard-cooked eggs, horseradish and sour cream dressing.

A shorter, easier-to-make version can be prepared with one 8-ounce jar of herring in sour cream. Dice the herring and onions which are in the sauce, then mix with ¾ cup of boiled potatoes, ½ cup each of cooked, diced carrots, diced raw cucumbers and diced raw celery, 1 medium-sized apple, cored and diced, and 2 hard-cooked eggs, diced. Makes 4 main - dish servings, 6-8 as appetizer.

Opening lead: Seven of ◇

South's one no trump response to his partner's take-out double holding only five points in high cards does not meet with our approval. Altho he has the opponent's suit well stopped, South should have a little better hand for his bid—one no trump in this situation designates about eight or nine points. Inasmuch as he has no real suit of his own, and a pass would be unthinkable, it is suggested that South respond in the cheapest available three card suit—hearts. Partner should be trusted to base any subsequent actions on his own holding.

West opened the seven of diamonds against three no trump, and dummy's queen won the trick as East dropped the nine. South observed that his work was cut out for him inasmuch as he lacked entries to make plays from his own hand.

The queen of spades was led at trick two and West won with the ace. A diamond continuation appeared risky, so West shifted to the ten of clubs. Dummy played the king and returned the jack of spades. East was in this time and led back the queen of clubs.

South won the trick with North's ace and cashed the ten of spades on which West discarded a diamond. From East's failure to return a diamond when he was in, declarer concluded that West had started with a six card suit. He also appeared to be marked with both the king and queen of hearts as part of his opening bid. If declarer's assumptions were correct, then a profitable series of end plays were in the offing.

The jack of hearts was led, putting West in with the queen. The latter was down to all red cards and, being reluctant to lead a diamond, he exited with the nine of hearts. North's ten was played, holding the trick. The ace was cashed, dropping the outstanding hearts, followed by dummy's four which was established as a thirteener.

West was down to three cards—the K-10-8 of diamonds. A diamond was led and ducked into his hand, forcing him to surrender the last two tricks to South's ace-jack. In all, declarer won three hearts, three diamonds, two clubs, and one spade for nine tricks and game.

Absentee Ballots Crucial in Alaska

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) —Absentee ballots apparently hold the key to the winner of Alaska's lone seat in the U.S. House of Representatives.

With 320 of the state's 356 precincts reported Wednesday night, Democratic incumbent Ralph J. Rivers led Republican Lowell Thomas Jr., 30,466 to 29,991. About 4,500 absentee ballots will be counted next week.

Thomas, son of the explorer and news commentator, is making his second attempt to unseat Rivers, who has represented Alaska since statehood in 1959.

Southern GOP Chiefs Pledge More Fight

ATLANTA (UPI) — Southern Republican leaders, aglow over a GOP uprising that elected seven congressmen and gave Sen. Barry Goldwater half the states of Dixie, promised Wednesday that "We have just begun to fight."

There were also indications that the newly-strong GOP in the South would resist any efforts to reorganize the party along more moderate lines.

The GOP cut the deepest into traditional Democratic strength in the Deep South. In Alabama, five Republicans won congressional seats, leaving only one Democrat in the delegation; Georgia and Mississippi each elected a Republican congressman — the first from those states in nearly a century.

Alabama Republicans gave Democratic Gov. George Wallace much credit for their victories. Wallace, who did not expect his campaign for conservatism to torpedo his own party within the state, had "no comment" Wednesday.

Goldwater took Georgia, the first time that state has ever gone Republican, in addition to Mississippi, Alabama, South Carolina and Louisiana.

To balance the GOP capture of alien territory, Florida, Tennessee and Virginia stepped into the Democratic column for the first time in four presidential elections. North Carolina and Arkansas also went for Johnson.

A massive Negro vote helped the President. In some precincts in Tennessee the Negro vote ran as high as 130 to 1 for Johnson.

In Georgia, where the GOP victory may have rung down the curtain on moderate Gov. Carl Sanders' "new look" era and scuttled his future political ambitions, Republicans predicted further victory.

Australians Say LBJ May Plan to Visit

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Sydney afternoon newspapers said today President Johnson probably would visit Australia next year.

The Sun reported from Canberra, the Australian capital, the visit probably would be between March and May and that the President almost certainly would bring his wife and daughters.

There was no confirmation in Canberra of this. Prime Minister Sir Robert Menzies issued an invitation to Johnson when he visited Washington last June. Menzies said later the President had agreed in principle to visit Australia.

Rights Leaders Say Negro Votes Counted

NEW YORK (AP) — Civil rights leaders took some credit today for President Johnson's landslide victory and said the election helped teach the nation's Negroes that their votes do count.

The President's trouncing of Republican Sen. Barry Goldwater also proved, they said, that most Americans reject the idea that states, rights come before civil rights.

They added that pressure for civil rights is not expected to decrease, but said it may come in a more traditional political form from now on.

President Johnson's victory was called a milestone for Negroes by Whitney M. Young Jr., executive director of the National Urban League.

This was echoed by Roy Wilkins, executive director of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored Peple, who added:

"We impressed upon the people the importance of the vote. Younger Negroes have given more study to what can be accomplished through the vote and how political developments have an effect on civil rights."

Both James Farmer, national director of the Congress of Racial Equality, and the Rev. Martin Luther King, head of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference and winner of the 1964 Nobel Peace Prize, said they thought Negro voters contributed mightily to the President's victory.

King forecast "a resumption of demonstrations to dramatize the indignities and injustices that we still face, particularly in the states of Alabama and Mississippi."

IRON ORE FROM ROCKS GRINDING ROCKS

NEW YORK (AP) — New and improved mineral processing techniques will revive the faltering domestic iron ore producing industry and make America less dependent on foreign sources of ore, an expert has predicted.

"Automation and control of iron ore processing plants and newly developed 'autogenous grinding' techniques — use of rocks to grind rocks—are giving a big boost to the steel industry," said Prof. Nathaniel Arbiter of Columbia University's School of Engineering and Applied Science mining school.

"The steel industry's mineral processing is challenging the copper industry, long a leader in new startling gains," he observed during the VII International Mineral Processing Congress held here in observance of the 100th anniversary of mining education at Columbia University.

Morgan Found Guilty in Check Case

Rex Morgan was found guilty by District Judge William M. Calvert late Wednesday afternoon of no account check.

The defendant had waived trial by jury and had chosen to be tried by court. He was accused of writing a $10 no account check Jan. 28, with intent to defraud the Fountain Valley Barber Shop.

On Feb. 7, 1962, Morgan, 53, 632 N. Foote Ave., was acquitted by Judge Calvert of a forgery. Morgan basing his defense on the allegation that he was intoxicated when he wrote the check and had no recollection of the event.

During Wednesday's trial he once again used the same defense. During direct examination conducted by his attorney Otto Hilbert, Morgan told the judge that he did not remember entering the barber's shop where the check was cashed nor did he remember being shaved.

Earlier in the day Stanley G. Thompson testified that he shaved the defendant Jan. 28 and cashed the check.

Morgan made no effort to deny writing the check but was definite that he did not recall doing so.

Under cross-examination by Deputy District Attorney Jack Roeser the defendant admitted to several other felony charges in this state and others. For some of these he received probation and on at least one occasion in Colorado in 1958 he was given three and a half years to five in the State Penitentiary for no account check. He also admitted to being sentenced to five years while he was in the U.S. Army.

Attorney Hilbert said all his client's felonies had been caused through drinking and that none of them had ever been crimes of violence.

In response Roeser described the defendant as "a psychological cripple who used alcoholism as a crutch time and time again." "Drinking has served him as an excuse for flouting the law," said Roeser, "and law abiding citizens should not be forced to pay for Mr. morgan's deliquency unless he is committed to an institution."

Hilbert indicated he did not want to file a motion for a new trial and the matter was continued to Nov. 20 for pre-sentence investigation.

Fallout Shelters Integral To Defense, Speaker States

The importance of considering fallout shelters as an integral part of national defense was emphasized by William P. Durkee, director of the Office of Civil Defense in Washington, as he addressed a luncheon gathering Wednesday of members of the United States Civil Defense Council, meeting this week in the Broadmoor Hotel.

Civil defense directors from most of the nation's major cities heard Durkee comment on the tremendous progress made in the various fields of civil defense during the 2½ years he has directed the national program.

"The character of the debate over the place of civil defense is different now than it was then," he said.

Durkee stated that a defense program centered around fallout shelters would save more lives than all the other defense factors such as detecting apparatus and anti-ballistic missiles.

"Shelters are our only defense against the deadliest effect of nuclear attack. . .fallout," Durkee declared.

Durkee said that the federal government will not even consider a civil defense program that concentrated only on coping with natural disasters, to the exclusion of nuclear disaster, and would not allocate funds to such a program.

He assured his audience that national civil defense is in "civilian hands" and that the responsibility for the program is delegated by the President to the Secretary of the Army who in turn passes it on to the Director of Civil Defense, a civilian. Durkee stated that the civil defense office is "an independent organization" designed to "support and aid" the military and Defense Department in the event of disaster.

Durkee quoted from a Soviet Union's spokesman's analysis of the civil defense situation in that country and demonstrated that their feelings and problems are much the same as our own.

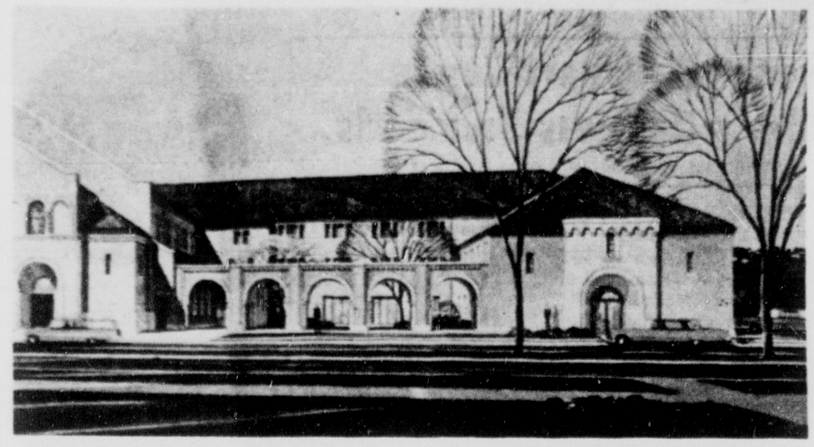
"There is no such thing as 'instant' civil defense," Durkee said, "all our problems have to be examined at national, state and local levels and the problem of civil defense requires the total cooperation of the whole apparatus of government, or it is doomed to fail."

"The excellence of performance in a natural disaster is no indication of our capabilities in a nuclear disaster," Durkee warned.

Durkee observed that it is easy and fashionable to blame public apathy for the failures of the civil defense program, but the programs and plans themselves must be examined critically before any blame is placed, he said.

Durkee stated he felt they could expect increased support from Congress and he said he thought that last year, for the first time, congressmen listened to what they had to say and tried to understand the aims and importance of the civil defense program.

Durkee concluded by encouraging the members of the council to put their heads together and "get to work."



CHURCH ADDITION—Pictured is the architects' drawing of the addition to be built onto the First Methodist Church, with construction to start within six months. $1 Million Expansion Planned by Church

The congregation of First Methodist Church has set up a $1 million program to erect a building to add facilities for the church school, and an assembly room for special activities, and additional office space.

Plans developed by Bunts and Kelsey, architects, call for an L-shaped structure connected to the north wall of the church at the west side of the property and extending north a distance of 130 feet.

This main portion of the addition will extend from the alley 88 feet to the east. The minor leg of the building will extend an additional 77 feet to the east and will be 55 feet in width. In the angle of the "L," tying the addition into the church, will be a cloister surrounding a garden. Between the north wall of the addition and St. Vrain Street will be a parking area for 40 cars, entered from both Nevada Avenue and the alley.

The first floor will consist principally of an assembly room, east of which and opening into the garden will be a gallery suitable for teas and receptions.

The balance of the first floor will be devoted to offices, including those for the minister, three associate ministers, the director of Christian education, and the administrative assistant to the minister.

There will also be a conference room capable of accommodating 20 to 30 persons. The main entrance will be on Nevada Avenue, with a second entrance from the parking area.

The basement, on the same level as the existing basement, will have additional youth facilities, including a youth center and lounge, with kitchen and storage spaces, a choir room with robing rooms for men and women, an office for the director of music, a room for senior citizens' activities, and three classrooms for adults.

The second floor will have 12 major classrooms and six minor classrooms for older youth classes, a first aid room, and storage of visual education equipment.

The west portion of the addition will be constructed with a third floor to provide space for expansion of church school facilities as the need arises.

The addition will contain approximately 48,000 square feet in the basement and first two floors, with 11,800 square feet on the third floor.

The exterior will be buff colored face birch and Indiana limestone with red tile roof to match the church building.

Bunts and Kelsey have been authorized to proceed with plans and specifications which they expect to have ready for bidding early next spring.

Blood Bank Accredited at Penrose Hosp.

Accreditation of the Penrose Hospital Blood Bank by the American Association of Blood Banks was announced this week by the association and the blood bank's medical director.

"You are hereby recognized as maintaining or exceeding the standards of blood bank performance as established by the American Association of Blood Banks," said Dr. Robert E. Klein, president of the blood banks association, in making the presentation. "The enclosed certificate is your formal official record of this action. We hope you will display this award in a prominent place because we share your pride in its significance."

Congratulating the hospital's governing board and staff Dr. Klein pointed out, "this recognition by the American Association of Blood Banks is assurance of your continued interest in establishing the highest quality medical care to the patients you serve."

Accreditation was preceded by a comprehensive questionnaire and physical inspection of the blood bank by one of the association's volunteer specialists.

The purpose of the voluntary inspection and accreditation program is to elevate the standards of practice within the transfusion service; to assist the blood bank director in determining whether procedures being employed in his institution meet the established standards; and to provide consultation service, thus assuring patients of increased safety of human blood transfusions.

Commenting that the Penrose Hospital Blood Bank is one of more than 700 banks which have been certified through this program, Dr. Klein said, "the patient who receives a transfusion of blood provided by a blood bank accredited by the American Association of Blood Banks can have full confidence that the bank has voluntarily met high standards of procedures and is continually striving to offer the best service possible."

Students in Survey Say Government Should Take Over Many Businesses

By SHARON ERVIN
Gazette Telegraph Staff Writer

The federal government should take over the ownership of banks, loan companies and many other kinds of business, or so say 63 per cent of the high school students who participated in a recent survey.

This information was part of a talk made by Connie Armstrong, a spokesman for the free enterprise system when he spoke to the Pikes Peak Advertising Club here Wednesday. Title of the talk was "A Man's True Worth."

"I live in Dallas," Armstrong said, "and recently we made the same kind of survey that had disturbed adults in large Eastern cities and in Tulsa, Okla. It was to find out the views of high school people on free enterprise and our government. Our results were much like the ones in the other tests. There were 62 per cent of the youngsters who did not believe we had competition in business today; about 82 per cent thought the government should find jobs for people, and 63 per cent thought the government should take over the ownership of banks, and many types of private businesses.

"I was stunned, along with a lot of adults, and decided that my oldest son and I ought to have a talk about free enterprise so I could make sure, at least, that he knew something about it. I asked him if he knew what free enterprise meant. He said he thought so but when he started explaining it, I realized I had succeeded only in convincing him that I thought the government was no damn good.

"So, I went to visit my grandfather to find out how to teach my son about free enterprise and our government.

"My grandfather said that I was right to be concerned because a man's true worth is judged by the depth of his thinking, his alignment with God's moral laws and the philosophy he teaches his children.

"'But,' he said, 'the first thing a man must do is to get to know himself and what he believes in. We are products of our own thinking and our society is not to blame for the mistaken ideas of children. It's the responsibility of parents to set an example for their children. But first a parent must know where he stands.'

"Grandfather asked me if things were all black and white for me — right or wrong — or if some things were grey. I said things were often grey.

"He asked me to add two and two. I said they equal four. He said if that was the right answer, then all other answers were wrong, weren't they. He explained that it was black and white because we have a standard by which we work mathematics. He said that was the same kind of standard a man must set for himself before he could begin to teach his children — that a man must have basic principles to stand up for and to live by.

"Then he asked me what kind of moral standards I had set for myself. I told him I tried to live by the Ten Commandments and the Golden Rule and some other things from the Bible. He asked me where the grey was in the Commandments. I knew I had him there. He asked if it was all right to kill another person. I said of course not. The commandments say 'Thou Shalt Not Kill,' but in time of war or in self defense it was all right.

"Grandfather said I was wrong.

"'The Commandment didn't say anything about in time of war or in self defense,' he explained. 'It is very important to know the difference between moral right and legal right. People can vote to make almost anything legal, but moral laws are judged only by God. You should try to remember that all true power comes from God, not from Washington.'

Grandfather said that to teach children about free enterprise a person first had to teach them about constitutional government based on freedom and responsibility.

"'Free enterprise is people who are in business to earn money, not to make money,' he said. 'Their profit is directly in proportion to the services they give. Not being willing to give the services for the money is like telling the fireplace to give you heat then you'll supply the wood. And it is the responsibility of free enterprise for men to

Incredulous Judge Reviews 'The Most' in Made Over Car

There was obvious dismay as Judge Allan Asher in Municipal Court Wednesday reviewed a report on a 15-year old boy charged with reckless and careless driving.

In tones of increasing incredulity, he noted that Francis Johnson, 817 S. 23rd St., had on Oct. 22 driven a car for several blocks that:

— Had the gas tank in the trunk.

— Had its motor tilted because of broken motor mounts.

— Had an electric fuel pump bolted to the front of the grille with a garden hose used for connection to the carburetor.

—Had gasoline for brake hydraulic fluid.

"And you got it up to 45 miles an hour," the judge said in amazed wonder, as spectators smothered their giggles.

According to the report, Francis had indeed, as he led police on a chase from Cucharras and 17th Streets, in and out of alleys, on and off the roadways, running a red light, until the car finally stopped at the Golden Cycle Mill dump on 21st Street.

Francis took three boys along with him on the ride who told police they tried to get him to stop.

The boy said he bought the 1950 Ford for $10 a week before and had fixed it up himself.

"Henry Ford might have tried some of your experiments," the judge said, "where is the car now?"

Francis said he left it at the dump.

"That's a good place for it," the judge said. He found Francis guilty of careless driving, but suspended the $25 fine on condition he attends a traffic lecture Nov. 18 in City Auditorium.

Francis is also charged in Justice of the Peace court with driving without an operators license.

Three Guilty Of Drinking On Public Way

Judge Allan Asher Wednesday in Municipal Court found two brothers and another man guilty of a charge of drinking in a vehicle on a public way and levied fines of $25 on each.

Only one of the trio appeared in court, Samuel Reyes, 21, of 414 S. Cascade Ave. His brother, Mike, 18, and Bernard Jablonski, 25, also of 414 S. Cascade Ave., had their $25 bonds ordered forfeited and applied to their fines.

Jerry Faires, 22, 2824 W. Kiowa St., changed his pleas to guilty of a reckless driving driving charges. Judge Asher found Faires guilty of the reckless charge, levied a $50 fine, and suspended $25 on condition he attends the traffic lecture Nov. 18 in the City Auditorium.

Thomas Bullock, 19, 228 N. Wahsatch Ave., was found guilty of speeding and was fined $15.

Judge Asher found Gilbert Dillon, 2419 W. Vermijo St., not guilty of a reckless driving charge but guilty of disobedience to the police and imposed a $15 fine. Dillon was represented by attorney Wayne Hodson.

Barbara Walton, 25, 739 E. Hills Rd., was fined $20 on her guilty plea to a charge of disobeying a traffic signal as this was her third traffic violation this year.

Nettie Deniston, 44, Springfield, and Wilber Quintana, 20, San Pablo, had bonds of $5 and $15 ordered forfeited on their failure to appear in court on charges of an improper turn and speeding.

One Charge Dismissed; Two More Filed

William F. Stewart who was to be tried in District Court Wednesday for forgery had the charge dismissed and the district attorney's office filed two new charges against him.

Stewart, 22, Ft. Carson, was originally accused of forging a $64 check Feb. 14 with intent to defraud Loetscher's Supermarket. Deputy District Attorney Montell Dunn explained to Judge William M. Calvert that there was insufficient evidence to sustain a conviction.

The new charges allege the defendant issued two checks one for $82.20 with intent to defraud Millers Supermarket No. 30 and another for $62.20 to defraud Millers No. 33. According to the information the offenses happened Feb. 14 and both checks were signed "Oscar Henry." A further count of conspiracy states Stewart conspired with George W. Hobbs to commit the felonies.

An employe of the Modern Glass Co., at 931 S. Tejon St., told police he found some small rocks on the sidewalk in front of the 64 inch by 116 inch window when he came to work Wednesday morning. The employe said he had no idea who might have broken the window.

Springs Man Injured in Two-Car Crash

A two-car accident at the intersection of Spruce St. and Bijou Streets Wednesday resulted in two injured persons, police reported.

Juan A. Archuleta, 43, of 225 S. Wahsatch Ave., was southbound on Spruce St. at 12:41 p.m. when he collided with a car driven by Wayne R. Roper, 36, of 2109 Patrician Way. Roper was westbound on Bijou Street.

The impact knocked the Archuleta vehicle into a south westerly direction, and it overturned and came to rest on its top at the southwest corner of the intersection.

Roper had abrasions to his right forehead and on the back of his left hand. He refused medical attention at the scene of the accident, police said.

'Oklahoma Credit Card' Gets Boys In Dutch Here

An "Oklahoma credit card" in the back of a car resulted in three boys aged 14, 15 and 16 being picked up by the sheriff's office Wednesday for syphoning gas.

Law enforcement officials generally refer to a gas can and rubber hose as an "Oklahoma credit card." Deputy Sheriffs Bob Walters and Ray Carey were checking the youngsters out near 2000 E. Bijou St. on a routine matter when the officers said they spotted the "credit card" in the rear of the vehicle.

Walters and Carey then noticed a puddle of gas by the rear of the car and further investigation revealed that the boys had syphoned four gallons of gas from a dump truck on the 2000 block of E. Bijou St. The matter has been turned over to the juvenile authorities.

Shrine Club Looted Loss Not Estimated

A local club building was entered and ransacked by burglars between 8:30 p.m. Tuesday and 9:30 a.m. Wednesday, police reported.

Intruders gained entrance to the Shrine Club building at 3301 W. Pikes Peak Ave., by breaking a window in the basement of the structure. Several rooms in the building were ransacked, but according to Shrine Club members called to the scene, it was impossible to determine if anything was missing at that time.

The thieves damaged several locks on doors to various rooms, smashed a juke box, damaged a pop machine to get at the coin box, and also damaged a file cabinet, police said.

Pioneers Museum on Way To Another Record Year

The city's Pioneers Museum, 25 W. Kiowa St., has had 17,306 visitors this year, according to Miss Dorothy Smith, curator.

This is 414 more than the 16,892 recorded during the first 10 months of 1963. Last year established an all-time high attendance at the museum with 18,500.

Prior to last year, Miss Smith added, attendance at the free museum always averaged between 10,000 and 12,000 annually.

Recently two new display cases were put into the lower floor of the new two-story addition. Two more will be added soon.

Even after the new addition was completed three years ago, there were many items that could not be displayed because of the lack of cases.

Miss Smith said the four display cases were presented to the museum after the city bought out the former lessee at the airport terminal restaurant, and the cases were no longer needed at Peterson Field.

The museum is open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday and from 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday. It is closed Monday.

Canon City Youth Bags Bearded Chin Deer

Dennis Del Duca, 14-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Nick Del Duca of Canon City will probably remember the first deer he shot.

The young hunter bagged a doe Sunday in the Grape Creek area near Canon City while hunting with his father. The mule deer had a hair covered deformity on her chin that looked like a goatee.

When Dennis cleaned the animal he found the deer had a double stomach. Such deformities are rarely found according to Preston Steele, of Canon City, the area's Wildlife Conservation officer.

Second Generation in Show Business Succeeds

By WILLIAM GLOVER

NEW YORK (AP) — Sons and daughters of stars are coming on strong in show business.

Trying to follow in mom or dad's footsteps — if mom or dad cavort in the limelight — is nothing new. Stage history is studded with Booths, Trees, Barrymores and Drews. But there has probably never been such a deluge of sibling hopefuls as now.

Some proudly use such fan-familiar names as Massey, Gleason, Carradine, Rooney and Redgrave. Others, bent on recognition without any borrowed cachet of senior fame, mask their identity behind such perfectly proper family other-names as Lindstrom, Farrow, Fitzsimmons, Minelli and Lewis.

Every one of them vows determination to make the grade without trading on the boon of birth. Some resisted parental objections, others assert a famous relation can perversely prove a handicap to opportunity.

Jane Fonda, for example, disavowed any smidgin of aid from her father, Henry, before her debut. Susan Strasberg, whose father, Lee, heads the Actors Studio, once pointed to an ironic twist in having ready access to people with pull.

When your parents are theater professionals, she said, others "are apt to pat you on the head and say 'go along dear'."

Among those who have attained public recognition are Miss Fonda, and her brother, Peter; Judy Garland's daughter, Liza Minelli; the two daughters of Sir Michael Redgrave, Vanessa and Lynn; and James MacArthur, the son of Helen Hayes.

Teen star Hayley Mills already rivals her father, John, in popular appeal. Raymond Massey is another father with two solidly established offspring to carry on family tradition, Anna and Daniel.

Among the most steadily active stage performers is Alan Alda, starring in "The Owl and the Pussycat" on Broadway this season while his father, Robert, sings along in "What Makes Sammy Run?" Sarah Marshall, the daughter of Herbert Marshall and Edna Best, has also advanced well up the ladder of recognition.

A number of screen queens have children bidding for attention with recent debuts, including Maureen O'Sullivan (her girl is Mia Farrow); Ingrid Bergman (Pia Lindstrom); Maureen O'Hara (Bronwyn FitzSimons); Loretta Young (Judy Lewis). Also represented in the second generation are the children of Ann Sothern, Joan Bennett, Ann Shirley, Thelma Ritter and Gale Storm.

Screen and stage are about even-up as magnets for the youngsters, but the night club circuit has also attracted them. Included in that group are Rex Harrison's son, Noel, and Harold Lloyd Jr. There's also a jazz outfit with a notable enrollment; Peter Lewis, son of Loretta Young, on guitar; Bob Linkletter, whose dad is television emcee Art, also on guitar; Jim O'Keefe (actor Dennis' boy), saxophone; Charles Correll Jr., son of the Amos 'n' Andy star, singer.

Sometimes there's an exception to the parent-offspring sequence. Daughters of two of the stage's greatest satrs, Ethel Merman and Mary Martin, for a while expressed yearnings for theatrical career, but both changed their minds for romance.

The list of those who seek the bubble of acclaim, however, keeps growing — a new generation out to stir public applause and parental pride.

By MILES A. SMITH
Associated Press Arts Editor

In contemporary art, music and literature, the examples of the second generation making its mark in the same profession as its elders are fairly rare.

The Wyeth family of painters is one unusual case.

The late N. C. Wyeth was known best as an illustrator. His son Andrew is one of the most sought-after realists of our time. His daughter Henriette (Mrs. Peter Hurd) is a painter of flowers and portraits. Andrew's son, James, already is launched on a professional career as an artist.

In music there is the Casadesus family — Robert, his wife Gaby and their son Jean. Robert is a pianist and composer, who sometimes is joined in a two-piano concert by his wife. Their son also is a concert pianist.

Among the violinists are the two Russians — David Oistrakh and his son Igor.

One American writing family has reached the third generation. The founder was the late Robert Benchley, a humorist of the printed page and the films. His son Nathaniel specializes in humorous novels, and will have his eighth book coming out this winter, called "The Visitors."

Nathaniel's son Peter took a trip around the world after college, and wrote his first book, "Time and a Ticket," which was publsihed in August.

Arthur M. Schlesinger Jr., a prolific author in the field of history and public affairs, is the son of a distinguished historian of an earlier day.

Ways Proposed To Cut Noise In Home

By JOHN PIERSON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Live near an airport? An expressway? An all-night drive-in?

Noisy, isn't it?

But what about the noise "inside" your house? Writing in a recent issue of the National Aircraft Noise Abatement Council's Newsletter, Chicago public relations man Don. O. Carlson says the modern kitchen with its appliances has a noise level just short of what you find in the cockpit of an old DC-3 airplane.

Mindful of all these decibels, the insulation Board Institute has come up with a "Quiet Home" program which, according to Carlson, will one day permit you to throw away that cotton you stuff in your ears.

If you're building or remodeling, you can install "sound deadening insulation board" underneath your wall board. Preliminary tests show the stuff also works well in floor and ceiling assemblies.

If you're not building and want quick relief, Carlson recommends:

—Install central air conditioning for the summer months (if you can afford it) and seal the house. This will keep out most of the outside noise.

—Weatherstrip all windows and doors.

—When you're not using your fireplace, make sure the damper is closed.

—Use only solid-core doors for outside entrances.

—Use acoustical ceiling tile in entrance hallways and in as many rooms as possible. You can install it yourself.

—Use heavier curtains and rugs.

—See to it that gutters and downspouts are tightly attached to the house. If they're loose, a loud outside noise can set them to reverberating.

Kennedys Prepare Senate Careers

BOSTON (AP) — For two hours the U.S. Senate's first brothers team in 161 years swapped quips and digs at a hospital bedside.

It was the day after election, and U.S. Sen.-elect Robert F. Kennedy, D-N.Y., hustled to New England Baptist Hospital Wednesday to exchange congratulations with his younger brother, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass.

Bobby emphasized he was only visiting Boston, a joking reference to campaign charges he was a carpetbagger in New York.

Ted, who scored a lopsided election victory for a six-year term in the Senate, kidded Bobby about his smaller margin in the New York election.

Their meeting was loud and full of laughs. Bobby brought along his wife, Ethel, and Ted's wife, Joan, completed the quartet.

Reporters waiting outside the room had trouble distinguishing which brother was talking. One newsman explained, "They both sound so much the same, it's impossible to tell."

He added, wistfully, that both sound just like their older brother, the late President John F. Kennedy. Ted now holds the Senate post once occupied by his older brother John.

During talks with newsmen, Ted said, "I think I asked Bobby if he was ruthless."

That was another reference to one of the charges made against Bobby during the New York election fight against Republican Sen. Kenneth B. Keating.

"Oh, no," Bobby interjected. "He's been getting pretty fresh since he's been in the hospital. He had to have his wife campaign for him."

Ted has been hospitalized since last June when his back was broken in a plane crash. He expects to leave the hospital before Christmas.

Another brotherly exchange came when photographers asked Bobby to move back because he was "casting a shadow" over Ted.

"It will be the same way in Washington," Ted said with a grin.

"He only says that because he got a bigger vote than I did," Bobby scoffed.

Ted's Massachusetts election margin exceeded 1 million out of a total vote that may go to 2.3 million. Bobby's edge was approximately 800,000.

They talked about problems in both Massachusetts and New York. One subject was more work for Navy yards and airbase locations.

"I explained to Ted," Bobby said, "that I was older (38) and that in our family we had a tradition that the older brother . . . ."

"Isn't Ted senior to you as a senator?" a newsman asked.

"I believe that he brought that up," Bobby replied.

The brothers Kennedy, when both sit in the Senate, will be the first such combination since 1803.

Theodore Foster of Rhode Island and Dwight Foster of Massachusetts served in the U.S. Senate from 1800 to 1803, when they resigned.

Tunney Wins After 14 Hours Being in Doubt

RIVERSIDE, Calif. (AP) — The only Democrat who successfully challenged an incumbent Republican congressman in California is John Varick Tunney — who did it in accepted Tunney fashion.

The 30-year-old attorney and his father, former heavyweight champion Gene Tunney, who retired from the ring undefeated, were watching the election returns in a Riverside hotel room.

Young Tunney recalled: "Two hours after the polls closed, it was announced on television that I had lost, that I had no chance. Not even an outside chance.

"I said, 'Oh, brother, I guess, I guess this is it.' But dad told me, 'It isn't too late. Remember I was knocked down in my rematch with Jack Dempsey, but I got back up, and won'."

Some boxing writers contended that Tunney was allowed 14 seconds to recover, instead of less than 10. His son went on to win, too, but it took him 14 hours.

Early results showed Republican Pat Minor Martin, 39, far ahead. It wasn't until early Wednesday that Tunney began to forge ahead. The final semi-official tally: Tunney 85,489, Martin 76,334. The two-county area has nearly a half million residents.

Young Tunney faced the so-called carpetbagger issue — he was a relative newcomer to the two-county inland district where he chose to seek office. He also took a firm and politically risky stand against Proposition 14 on the California ballot, which called for a state constitutional amendment nullifying California's anti-discriminatory Rumford Act.

The Riverside Press-Enterprise editorialized today that much of the credit for Tunney's victory was due to public dissatisfaction with Rep. Martin's two years in Washington.

Others attributed Tunney's win to hard campaigning. His father and Dempsey both helped him; so did Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., an old school roommate, prior to Kennedy's airplane accident injury. Kennedy's sister, Pat Kennedy Lawford, also campaigned for him.

Tunney himself was a tireless worker. As he planned a vacation with his wife and two children, he said: "This campaign has been the most fascinating experience of my life. I'll bet I shook 70,000 hands."

Pages Not Numbered In Photo Book

By BART KINCH
United Press International

It was interesting to note that the pages are not numbered in "The Unguarded Moment, A Photographic Interpretation."

This, at first, might seem a bit unusual, yet it is completely appropriate when one considers that this is an unusual book.

Alberto Moravia, Leonard Bernstein; Duke Ellington, Pablo Casals, George Balanchine, Louis Armstrong; Edna Ferber, Thomas Merton, Gian - Carlo Menotti, Bruno Walter, Edward Albee, W. H. Auden, Eleanor Roosevelt, Igor Stravinsky and so on.

Plaut's portraits are among the most revealing this viewer has ever seen, yet many of them appear almost casual. In none does the cameraman intrude.

This has the effect on the viewer of creating a feeling that he has accidentally stumbled upon the great conductor so-and-so without the maestro being aware of the viewer's presence.

The resultant portraits thus are intimate and personal.

Coupled with each portrait Plaut has included some little known anecdote about the person photographed. The entire volume is a tribute to the author-photographer's powers of perception, his sense of timing and his artistry. It is a book worth careful study.

I have only one negative reaction to it. The price. Not that it is not worth the $15 list price, but because the price will make it impossible for a great many lovers of fine, candid-type portraits to add this volume to their libraries.

Perhaps it would be wise for the publishers to contemplate putting out a paperback edition with a more modest price tag such as was done with "The Family of Man," which could be purchased in either hard or soft cover editions.

In addition to the fine photographs and the biographical notes, Plaut included an appendix that was written for camera fans only. It includes technical data on the various photographers—camera used, film, exposure, etc., and, in some instances, some information about where and how the particular picture was taken.

WINTER BABIES DO BEST

LONDON, Eng. (AP)— Children born in the last 4 months of the year have a better chance of doing well in school than those born in other months, according to a recent survey by the National Foundation for Educational Research. School performance and birth dates of a group of 1,315 children in a single town in southern England were evaluated in the survey.

Children born in the January-April period scored next best, with those born from May to August faring worst as a group.

Johnson, Hubert Celebrate With Big Barbecue

By FRANK CORMIER

JOHNSON CITY, Tex. (AP) — President Johnson and Hubert H. Humphrey, his vice president-to-be, hit it off in fine fashion as they wound up a Texas hill country huddle today.

Lounging around the LBJ Ranch 15 miles west of this hamlet founded by the President's grandfather, the nation's two top Democrats celebrated Tuesday's landslide victory.

They looked much like peas in a pod as they hiked around the 400 presidential acres and rode horses in Western garb.

Humphrey, a one-time druggist, looked anything but that as he moseyed around the ranch on a horse which, from all appearances, was tame and well behaved.

The President greeted Humphrey and wife Muriel with an elaborate Texas barbecue Wednesday.

Hardly had the Minnesotan landed on the LBJ property when he was clapped into Western pants, Western jacket, Western boots and Western hat and, with a mite of encouragement, enticed to climb aboard the horse.

Afterwards, Johnson took Humphrey in tow for a tour of his birthplace, reconstructed on the property, and other landmarks which he delights in showing to visitors.

Both were in a holiday mood and obviously enjoying their visit.

Privately, they talked about the future of the vice presidency — an office often scorned — and looked ahead to the legislative program the Johnson-Humphrey administration will offer to the nation in January.

Both men are graduates of the Senate and hope that, with this background, they can work in tandem to promote the "Great Society" proposals that will bear the LBJ brand.

Jack Valenti, a Johnson aide, said of the ranch meeting: "They just want to meet, talk and relax."

Both men were tired after strenuous campaigns that took each into 40 states or more. Both were ready to unwind.

Humphrey was scheduled to fly to Washington late today. The Johnsons plan to spend several more days at their ranch.

Medicare Plans to Be Resumed in Congress

By JOE HALL

WASHINGTON (AP) — The widened Democratic margin in Congress could brighten chances for two key Johnson administration proposals — health care for the elderly and aid to the depressed Appalachian region.

The White House is certain to read the landslide victory of President Johnson as a mandate to push harder for both measures, sidetracked in the last session.

Final returns indicate a net gain of two Senate seats for the Democrats and — more significantly — about 40 House seats.

In the 88th Congress, the Democratic Senate edge of 66 to 34 already was so big that the majority party could push through even its most controversial programs.

The proposal to provide medical care for older Americans by boosting Social Security taxes cleared the Senate by five votes. The $1 billion Appalachian aid bill was approved by a wide margin.

But the health plan was rejected in a conference with the House and House leaders decided against bringing up the Appalachian legislation, a sure sign that they feared defeat despite a 257-178 margin.

The new congressional lineup encouraged Democrats to believe they could put through these long-disputed measures:

—Creation of a Cabinet department of urban affairs or, as it has been called more recently, a department of housing and community development.

—Revision of the immigration laws to knock out the long-standing national origins quota system.

—Extension of the Wages and Hours Act to include some types of service workers long excluded.

—Establishment of some form of national standards for the unemployment compensation system.

Democratic liberals say also it now should be easier to get Congress to vote the needed funds for such programs as vocational education, mass transit, manpower retraining and depressed areas.

Johnson is likely to ask for speedy action on two bills which died at the end of the 1964 session but are considered essential by the administration to aid in U.S. foreign policy.

One would implement the International Coffee Agreement; the House killed a compromise version of this. The other would continue present quotas for sales of foreign sugar in the American market; these will expire Dec. 31 but the administration expects to extend them administratively until Congress can act.

Many Democrats are eager to vote on a Social Security bill since beneficiaries under this program were given a commitment in the 1964 session by both branches of Congress for an increase in their payments.

The House voted a 5 per cent raise, the Senate a $7 increase in basic payments. The measure went down the drain in the dispute over the health care plan.

Rep. Wilbur D. Mills, D-Ark., chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, who cast the decisive vote against the plan in the conference, may be a stumbling block again next year.

However, health care advocates believe Mills may be more amenable in view of the greatly increased Democratic vote in the House. The Arkansan has said he is willing to take another look at the questi

A Social Secur financed health system has been a hotly disputed issue at the Capitol for eight years. Its antecedents go back much further than that.

Mills' committee also will be busy with another important Johnson recommendation in 1965, repeal or revision on previous federal excise taxes.

The President is expected to renew two additional proposals which failed this year — a water pollution control bill and housing legislation designed to aid in development of satellite communities near big cities.

The 1965 session also may see a revival of efforts to curtail effects of the Supeme Court decision on reapportionment of state legislatures.

But much of the steam for this came from Republicans and Southern Democrats. Judging by the new lineup, the efforts would seem to have less chance of success.

ONE-SHOT STOFER

Stofer was sitting under a tree watching for squirrels when a large wildcat appeared 10 feet away. He downed it with one shot.

The cat, weighing 17 pounds and measuring 30 inches, was the first killed in Ohio County in years.

Minor Election Complaints Noted

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department reports it received about 50 election complaints during Tuesday's voting. It said most were minor.

A department spokesman Wednesday called this a relatively small number, which he attributed to advance public notice by U.S. attorneys across the nation that they were standing by to handle quickly any trouble that occurred.

The complaints came from 26 states — not identified — and included broken voting machines, reported threats against poll watchers and attempts to slow down voting by Negroes.

No charges have been filed, the spokesman said and some of the cases already have been dropped.

Space Defense Rockets Watch on Lonely Island

By ALVIN B. WEBB, Jr.
United Press International

In the fiery dawn off Florida's east coast, a U.S. B-47 jet bomber with a single bullet slung beneath its wing raced toward a showdown with an invader from space.

". . . T-minus-10 seconds . . . 9 . . . 8..."About 35,000 feet below and to the west, the latticed metal dish of Cape Canaveral's TLM-18 radar felt the skies with invisible fingers.

". . . 7 . . . 6 . . . 5 . . ." Two "blips" danced on the radar screen and carved dark scars on its greenish face—the bomber, streaking toward its defense station at more than 400 miles an hour, and the space intruder, plunging toward earth at 60 times that speed.

". . . 4 . . . 3 . . ." Aboard the bomber, the firing officer's hand rested easily onaswitch defender closed seven miles with each monotone syllable of the countdown. ". . . 2 . . . 1 . . ."

"Zero!"

The swift movement of one finger, the final human act in this split-second drama, tripped the switch and triggered the unique bullet.

In the next moment, the multi-ton machine was shooting into space, driven by a solid-fueled rocket engine pouring tons of energy and a thick, white exhaust into the darkening vacuum.

The rocket became a third "blip" on the Canaveral radar screen—and moved on a deadly near-collision course toward the dot from space.

The date was Oct. 13, 1959—the birth of America's attempts to build a defense against possible space weapons.

Such a shield exists today. That was revealed when President Johnson, last Sept. 17 in Sacramento, Calif., said "we now have developed and tested two systems with the ability to intercept and destroy armed satellites . . ."

One system is a battery of aging Thor intermediate-range missiles on lonely Johnston Island, 800 miles west-southwest of Hawaii. The other is a contingent of Nike-Zeus anti-missile missiles on Kwajalein Island.

These are the ack-ack guns of the space age—the souped-up artillery to gun down bombs or bombers traveling in orbit . . .

Today, as far as intelligence systems can determine, there is no such thing as a satellite bomber—either Soviet or U.S.

The idea of a hydrogen bomb in orbit, awaiting only a radio command to send megatons of destruction raining on earth, has been a nightmare in defense circles.

But for a variety of technical and political reasons, the U.S. rarely given serious consideration to any nuclear-armed bombardment satellite of its own.

Defense experts, however, have worried lest someone else develope more technical ability and correspondingly less scruples in such matters. From that concern evolved the Cape Canaveral test of Oct. 13, 1959, in quest of an anti-satellite weapon.

The defense chose, as its dueling weapon an experimental two-stage missile known as Bold Orion. The rocket was built by the Martin Co. in its unsuccessful bid for an Air Force contract for an air-launched ballistic missile—the now-dead Skybolt program.

The enemy "invader" was America's own Explorer-6, a 142-pound satellite that had rendered excellent scientific service since its leap into space on the preceeding Aug. 7.

Explorer-6 became the target because, on that particular October morning, the low point of 120 miles of Cape Canaveral—and within range of Bold Orion and its dummy warhead.

The missile reportedly missed the satellite by four miles. But it was a remarkable feat of guidance and a solid success on a measuring stick of "ifs." If Explorer-6 had been a space bomb, if Bold Orion had been an anti-satellite, if it had exploded a warhead at the right instant, then the satellite would have been destroyed.

The Defense Department was pleased, and the whole business might have ambled leisurely along for years, had the Soviet Union not tweaked some nerves with the seven-ton Sputnik-8 it orbited on Feb. 12, 1961.

Using Sputnik-8 as a platform in space, the Russians fired a small probe outward toward the planet Venus. But, U.S. defense chiefs wondered, what if the payload had been a nuclear warhead instead of scientific instruments - and aimed downward instead of upward?

The Defense Department thumbed through the Pentagon's project files and chose its retaliatory weapon for such an eventuality—but not the anti-satellite missile whose relative simplicity it had dramatically demonstrated at Canaveral.

The nominee was a space-going "hunter-killer" known as Saint, an acronym for "satellite interceptor."

Saint, riding into orbit atop giant Atlas-Agena rockets, would carry radar and delicate propulsion systems to within 50 feet of a suspected satellite; television and radiation sensors to determine whether it was friend or foe, and explosives to blow it out of the sky.

In December 1960, the Air Force gave the Radio Corp. of America (RCA) a $28 million go-ahead to build four Saints, each weighing 2,200 pounds, for launchings into 500-mile-high orbits from Cape Canaveral.

The first Saints, it was said, would be shot at previously orbited balloons, each about 25 feet in diameter, starting in December 1961.

The project never left the ground. If Saint's specifications for interception, inspection and destruction were a dream to defense planners, they were a nightmare to engineers and technicians.

Suitable equipment was found lacking. Schedules slipped. Prices soared.

The North American Air Defense Command (NORAD), the organization that would use Saint, decided it was so much wasted time and money.

In the midst of the Saint squabbling, a Navy captain went before a closed meeting of the House Space Committee and outlined his own proposal for a satellite defense.

Capt. Robert Frietag, chief of the Navy Office of Astronautics, proposed a missile to be launched into the path of an onrushing satellite—or simply an extention of the anti-satellite missile idea demonstrated by Bold Orion.

PLUMB JUICED

PUEBLO, Colo. (AP)—Plums led to the downfall of three convicts escaping from the Colorado prison honor farm. Before their getaway the men drank freely of a brew concocted from plums picked on the farm. They were caught soon after in a highly intoxicated condition.

'Peyton Place' Is Acclaimed As Best Show

By WARD CANNEL
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

NEW YORK (NEA)—We are a little startled to be saying this. But to our way of thinking, the new television serial "Peyton Place" is just about best show of this season — or any other, for that matter.

We probably would not have felt that way a year ago. On the other hand, we were not writing this column a year ago and had not yet heard from the many experts who know what people are interested in.

But having been instructed in this science, we can now see hat "Peyton Place" fills almost every requirement."

It tells a story, never draws a conclusion. It does not ask that you bring anything to it, and it does not suggest that you take anything from it. It is never excellent, so it does not have to pay the price of occasionally missing its mark. It aims for neither wit nor warmth, but only for passion.

It is, in scientific terms, of people and not about ideas.

There appears, however, to be one small flaw in this otherwise perfect work.

In the story of Peyton Place it seems to us that the people of Peyton Place are not interested in what people are interested in.

This is a minor problem, of course, and can be easily fixed without sacrificing mediocrity or letting any ideas interfere with the wonderfully simple story line.

To begin with, George Anderson who seems to have an average of 11.2 years of education and a family of 3.3 members. In the nearly two months since George first appeared, he has not once mentioned Viet Nam, General De Gaulle or the Berlin Wall. All he ever seems to talk about is his suspicion that his wife is having an affair with another man.

George Anderson's daughter, Betty, is a typical teen-ager. However, we have not once heard her talk about clothes, face care or The Beatles' latest hit. She spends all her time moping over the fact that she is pregnant.

The father of the child is Rod Harrington, son of the richest man in town and obviously the product of a privileged upbringing and the finer things of life. In real life, if we know what people are interested in (and we most certainly do) Rod would long ago have said:

"Say, dad, this three-man Russian space flight has me worried. How does it make the United States look in the eyes of the uncommitted nations?"

But instead, the wooden fellow does nothing but moon over Allison MacKenzie, illegitimate, who worries all the time about whether or not she is rigid instead of being interested in the interesting news that Debbie Reynolds and Elizabeth Taylor have reconciled.

And Constance MacKenzie's beau, young Dr. Rossi — well, he hasn't once mentioned Queen Eliabeth's visit to Canada or "Newsweek's" exclusive interview with Leopold Stokowski.

Analysis Shows Distribution Of Votes

NEW YORK (AP) — A computer analysis of the Colorado vote in Tuesday's election shows that Barry Goldwater received the votes of 65 per cent of persons in high income brackets, but that President Johnson swept the votes of middle and low income groups.

Johnson got 68 per cent of the middle income vote, NBC's electronic Vote Analysis (EVA) showed, and 82 per cent of the low income vote. Johnson's showing in the middle income group was up 18 per cent from the percentage won by the late John F. Kennedy in 1960. His showing in the low income vote group was 10 per cent above Kennedy's.

In 1960, Republican Richard M. Nixon won the state by 71,000 votes.

The computer analysis reported Johnson polled 65 per cent of the vote in Denver, bettering Kennedy's 1960 showing by 15 per cent, and received 60 per cent of the vote in the suburbs and the rest of the state, up 17 per cent from 1960.

The analysis showed Johnson won 89 per cent of the Latin and 80 per cent of the Jewish vote, up 10 per cent.

Distant Job Seekers Get TV Interview

By DON MULLEN

PALO ALTO, Calif. (UPI)—So you've got talent, college degrees, a presentable personality, but you're short of cash supporting a family and there is a dream job available 3,000 miles away where they want to interview you right away on a go-now, pay-now travel basis.

The only trouble is, if you hock the family jewels and then don't get the job, what then?

Don't get out the violins, Charlie—a professor has figured out how to give you a coast-to-coast personnel screen test and you don't have to leave your living room.

The idea already has been tested at Stanford University here, with Department of Psychiatry officials watching a 75-minute television tape of a young interne answering job interview questions while relaxing in an informal atmosphere in New York.

The electronic interview was conceived by Dr. James H. Ryan of the Psychiatric Institute at New York's Columbia University.

Discovering that both Stanford and Columbia psychiatric departments use television recorders with unlimited tape reuse, Ryan recently suggested to Stanford's residency selection committee that they submit questions to him needed in their search for new internes in psychiatry.

The committee agreed to try the idea. Ryan then took the Institutes' television recorder and a portable video camera home and interviewed a young hopeful without the means to make a transcontinental trip.

One week later, Stanford's seven man residency selection committee convened in front of a television monitor plugged into their recorder to see and hear the applicant's reactions and responses to their questions.

Queries such as "Why do you want to be a psychiatrist?", and "Would you prefer private practice or an academic career?" were mixed with personal questions like: "Tell me about your parents."

The 75-minute interview also covered the interne's work in psychiatric research, and what he discovered about himself through his treating of clinic patients during medical school.

When the tape was finished, staff members used the last 15 minutes on the reel to record comments on the interne's interview. The tape was then mailed back to Ryan.

Dr. Thomas A. Gonda, Stanford Associate professor of psychiatry and chairman of the selection committee, praised the television tape interview in commenting on his department's special problems in interviews.

He explained that Stanford receives about 10 applications for residency in psychiatry for each opening.

By using television tapes, "interviews can be scheduled for the convenience of the busy committee members as a group, or even one or two members at a time," he said.

"Either way, TV recording has the potential of presenting committee members the identical interview on which decisions can be made," he said.

The recording tape can be used and re-used several thousand times with the overall cost about a dollar an hour.

But, perhaps the second most important asset of this new interview technique is that special lighting is not needed, and an applicant is relaxed and without that under-the-gun nervousness.

PRICE REDUCTIONS

NEW YORK (UPI)—Westinghouse Electric Corp. Wednesday announced price reductions on a line of power transformers rated at 20,000 kilovolt amperes and more, effective Nov. 2.

The cuts, made by widening the discount to 18 per cent from 15 per cent, were made to meet competitive prices by General Electric Co. on individual negotiations, Westinghouse said.

TAKE A SPACE WALK

DAYTON, Ohio (AP)—Moon-originated air cars now appearing in the "Dick Tracy" comic strip may not be too far ahead of Air Force research, the Aero Propulsion Laboratory here says.

Flight testing is expected to start about next February on a jet - propelled chest-and-back rig which would allow an astronaut to leave an orbiting vehicle, fly for about an hour and communicate. Under construction by Ling-Temco Vought Inc., it's called a modular maneuvering unit.

Ulcers May End Shofner's Work

NEW YORK (AP) — Del Shofner, star pass catcher of the New York Giants, may be lost to the National Football League club for the rest of the season because of stomach ulcers.

Shofner sat our last Sunday's St. Louis game with a liver virus and severe cold. He entered St. Elizabeth's Hospital Sunday night for rest and examination. Blood tests revealed the aggravated ulcer condition.

Shofner, who has been troubled with ulcers throughout his career as a pro, reported to the Giants' camp underweight at 170 pounds. He missed the Giants' opener with a pulled hamstring muscle and hurt his left thumb against Cleveland two weeks ago.

He will remain in the hospital from 10 days to two weeks. Joe Morrison inherits his split end spot in the Giants' offense.

CARRIES 33 TIMES

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Joe Harris, senior tailback for New Mexico's Lobos, broke the school record when he carried 33 times against Arizona. He netted 74 yards in the team's 10-7 victory.

provide jobs for their fellow men. If you try to teach your children to try to get something for nothing, you are teaching them socialism at home.

"'But people are a lot like frogs in some ways. If you put a frog in 90-degree water, he will jump right out. But if you put the same frog in a pan of water at 65 degrees, then slowly turn the heat up, a half a degree at a time, the frog will sit there until he boils himself to death. He gets used to things in small doses and he thinks he can't get along without it.

"'Karl Marx once wrote about graduated income tax. No one refers to it as socialistic or communistic today — it's the American way of life. Thirty years ago a man suggesting some of the laws we are considering today would have been tried for treason.'

"I knew he was right. Norman Thomas wrote in 1933, 'Never will this country vote for socialism under that name, but one day every plank in my platform will be voted in under the name humanitarianism.'

"Also, I remembered a story from around East Texas where I was raised. There were some wild hogs that ran the bottom land. Farmers bragged if their dogs went in there and came back alive. One day an old fellow came along — a stranger— and he asked where he could find some wild hogs. He said he was in the mood for hog meat. The farmers tried to warn him that a man couldn't go into the bottom land and come out alive, but the old man said he was going anyway. He set out with a hammer, some ears of corn and some wood. The first day, he threw a couple of ears of corn on the ground but the hogs were having none of it. But the second day, a baby hog picked up one of the ears and carried it off and ate it. The next day, several young hogs took the corn he put out and the next day the grown hogs were going after the corn — after all, they figured if they didn't eat it, someone else would.

"Well, everyday, the old man put more corn out and pretty soon the hogs stopped rooting around for themselves, after all they could get their food without any work this way. The old man started building a fence. The hogs sort of got used to it and the fence got higher every day. Then the old man put a trap gate on the front and caught the hogs. They made a little noise but they had gotten used to the fence and the noise didn't last long. The man took the hogs back into town and when the farmers asked how he had done it, he told them that he could trap any animal alive if he could just get it depending on him.

"I overheard a converastion not long ago which sums up the growing attitude today. One man was telling the other one that the government could solve all the financial problems if it just gathered up all the money and doled it out to everyone equally. I couldn't help stopping. I told him that the plan would never work because in 10 years the people with money now would have it back again because they would still have the same drives and initiative. He said I didn't understand. He meant they should divide the money up every Saturday morning."

Major Leagues Blueprint Ford's Replacement

CHICAGO (AP) — Arthur Allyn, owner of the Chicago White Sox, has made a blueprint of the type of a man he wants to succeed Ford Frick as baseball commissioner.

Frick retires next fall and the field for his successor will be scanned when the major league magnates meet in Phoenix.

"What we need is a dynamic, aggressive leader who has proved himself as the head of a business or industry and who has some get up and go," says Allyn.

"The new commissioners would be the absolute boss. He would be the man who takes positive action, makes the decisions and set policy. He would have to be a brilliant administrator and an eminent success — recognized as such by his parent position.

"He would have to be a man who doesn't need the job and therefore will make decisions fearlessly, and will slap down the owners whether it costs him the job or not. He would have to be an excellent public speaker who will give baseball a fine image and demand respect from everybody including Congressmen.

"And the fellow who takes over should be a working head of baseball not somebody who just sits in an office. He should get around visiting each club and each ball park at least twice a year.

Strikes Effect Car-Buying Public, Dealers

The long, darwn - out settlement of local issues in strikes against some automobile manufacturers is causing great inconvenience to the car-buying public and serious business losses to new car dealers of the nation and to allied industries which depend upon the retail automobile business for their economic welfare, C. Ed Flandro, president of the National Automobile Dealers Association, said today.

"Despite the general public impression created by headline reports of settlements of the national issues involved in the long strike, there still exists a severe shortage of cars resulting from the failure to resolve local issues," Flandro emphasized.

Pointing out that the general economy of the country can be seriously affected if the situation is not resolved immediately, the NADA president called on all concerned to resolve the differences quickly.

"Car buyers throughout the country are impatiently awaiting deliveries of 1965 models, and until full settlement of the strikes is brought about dealers are not only helpless in serving their customers but are faced with serious business losses because of overhead and heavy payrolls which must be met even though cars are not available for delivery," Flandro said.

The franchised new car dealers of the nation employ 657,000 persons who are being adversely affected by the strike.

Shortage of parts is also becoming a serious by-product of the strike, Flandro stated, noting that servicing of cars represents another area which continuation of local strikes is seriously affecting.

One of the most bothersome effects of the strikes, Flandro said, stemmed from the existing widespread public confusion about the strikes.

"It's very confusing," he stated, "because the settlement of the strike at the national level was widely publicized, but the local strikes which are keeping auto production at a virtual standstill have not been so widely publicized. Dealers are reporting to me that many of their customers are under the impression the strikes have been settled.

How Did George Do It, Film People Wonder

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — How did George do it?

Hollywood's liberals were still shaking their heads today over how George Murphy danced off with the U.S. senatorship in the face of the Johnson landslide. They had refused to take the ex-hoofer seriously — until election results late Tuesday night indicated he had scored a victory over Pierre Salinger.

In the beginning, hardly anyone believed Murphy could make a serious bid for the Senate. When he came for an interview at the Brown Derby earlier this year, a friend remarked: "You may even win the Republican primary."

"I'm not only going to win the primary," Murphy replied; "I'm going to win the general election in November."

The campaign brought more activity from show people than any statewide election in recent times. The "People for Pierre" traveled through the state with their candidate and appeared on television. Among them: Henry Fonda, Gregory Peck, Dick Van Dyke, Janet Leigh, Danny Thomas, John Forsythe, Gene Kelly, Carl Reiner Dan Blocker.

"I don't mean to downgrade my friend Gene Kelly," says Murphy, "but I had the support of the more longstanding members of the Hollywood community, people like John Wayne, Samuel Goldwyn and Walt Disney. Voters are more impressed by that kind of backing."

The Murphy headquarters on election night featured some of his noted backers: Cesar Romero, Gene Raymond, Wendell Corey, Constance Moore, Freeman Gosden — Amos of Amos and Andy. Also present was Andy Devine, Murphy's cochairman for Orange County. George had gone to Balboa to an election-day lunch with his old pal Andy.

The political pundits can cite a number of reasons why Murphy defeated the former presidential press secretary. But the new senator touched upon a factor which might support the contention that politics is not far removed from show business.

"I think our television debate was the turning point for me," he said. "People got a chance to look at me and at my opponent, and they could compare."

Franks Picks Coaches for San Francisco

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Manager Herman Franks will operate the San Francisco Giants in 1965 with a board of strategy consisting of two holdover coaches from the Alvin Dark regime, plus newcomer Charley Fox.

The baseball club announced Wednesday that pitching coach Larry Jansen and veteran major leaguer Harry (Cookie) Lavagetto have been signed again. Whitey Lockman was not retained.

Fox, 43, has spent 23 years in the Giants organization as a player and minor league manager. Last season he piloted Tacoma, Wash., which finished fifth in the Pacific Coast League's Western Division.

Prior to announcement that Franks would replace Dark as manager, there was speculation that Fox was the choice for the job.

A native of New York City, Fox was a resident of Massillon, Ohio, for several years and last season moved to Tacoma.

Lavagetto lives in Oakland and joined the Giants coaching staff last year. He played and managed in the major leagues.

Jansen has been the pitching coach since 1961 and formerly was a star hurler with the club.

Switches Get New Look in Electric Style

By MARGERY McELHENY

CHICAGO (UPI) — Home buyers today not only insist on a dream kitchen or bath, but also the convenience and lighting comfort available with new switches and outlets.

Home builders, conscious of the public's increased awareness of sophisticated wiring devices, are wiring model homes with the latest equipment.

The General Electric Co. recommends that new home shoppers look for these modern touches:

—Brightness controls to change the light level of a room. A turn of the dial permits selection of the lighting mood wanted in a particular room. It can be set at full bright while preparing the dining-living room area for guests, then dialed down to a comfortable, subdued light level just before they arrive.

In a playroom, a brightness control can be used to adjust the lights for playing games with the children, for television viewing, or just relaxing.

—Push-button pilot switches control inconveniently located lights, such as outdoor, attic and basement lights.

The advantage of a pilot switch is appreciated by anyone who has trekked to the basement to see if lights were inadvertently left on.

These switches have a red plastic jewel insert in the ivory button which remains lighted when the lights it controls are on. When the lights are off, the pilot is off, too.

—Mercury switches eliminate the sharp, annoying click of the ordinary light switch. Electrical contact is made by the flowing together of two pools of mercury. The switches are noiseless and featherlight in operation. They are particularly useful near the baby's room, where a sharp click from an ordinary swich might distrub nap time.

Lighted triggers on some models make finding the switch in the dark no problem at all. A new pilot-light model, with clear red or amber trigger, tells when lights are on or off.

Since the flowing together of mercury is a non-mechanical action, mercury switches last years longer because there's nothing to wear out.

—Split outlets offer greater flexibility. The lower part of a split outlet (for one plug) is always "live;" the upper part (for the second plug) can be switched on or off from a wall switch.

Split outlets are very handy near a night table. An electric clock can be plugged into the lower, "always-live" outlet so it can run without interruption. At the same time, a table lamp, plugged into the upper, "on-off" outlet can be switched on and off from a wall switch next to the doorway.

— Weatherproof outlets and switches provide prolonged outdoor life. The trend toward increased outdoor living has created a greater need for electrical outlets and switches located in or near the exterior of a house. Outlets are needed for electrical garden tools and portable garden lights. Switches are used to control permanent lighting fixtures from outdoor locations—alongside the swimming pool, garden fish pool, barbecue and other areas.

— Weatherproof plates with metal, spring-hinged covers protect outlets and switches from the elements. Covers with locking devices also can be installed to prevent unauthorized use of the outlet or switch.

Smaller Cities Planning for Urban Renewal

By JOHN PIERSON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Who says slum clearance is for big cities only? The truth is that small cities have jumped into urban renewal in a big way.

According to latest figures, nearly 800 cities are now engaged in federally-assisted renewal programs. Seven out of 10 of them are what census people call "small." That means they have fewer than 50,000 inhabitants.

Federal renewal grants to small cities total nearly $800 million so far.

In addition, Uncle Sam has spent more than $70 million to help about 3,900 small cities plan expansion, transport systems, schools, water and sewer mains, parks and playgrounds.

Why this aid?

President Johnson has said that expansion of the country's urban areas during the past two decades often has come about "in a sprawling, space-consuming, unplanned and uneconomic way . . . Rural communities and small towns face similar pressures."

Robert C. Morris, director of the Lake County (Ill.) Planning Commission, recently summed up the smaller community's plight this way: "We're worried about running short of water; at the same time we're worrying about getting flooded out.

"We're worrying about becoming industrialized and urbanized; at the same time we're worrying about becoming overtaxed. We're worrying about becoming polluted; we're worrying about losing mass transit, even temporarily.

"And we're worried about having to live on little pieces of land in between interchanges in the highway network."

Small cities have some special problems that big cities tend to escape. There's less slack in a small city's economy. A big city can survive the loss of a major industry; a small city very often cannot.

A major new industry, easily digested by a big city, may bring to a small city all but insurmountable expansion problems—schools, water and sewage lines, streets, etc.

Many small cities lack full-time planning staffs—or even one planner.

Feeling the press of these problems, small cities are turning to the federal government for help in finding solutions. Urban renewal is busting out all over.

LITTERBAGS MAKE VOTES

NEW YORK (AP)—The anti-litter movements is adding a new dimension to 1964 politicking.

The Democrats are promoting a litterbag with the slogan: "LBJ for the U.S.A. — Vote Democratic."

In Texas, a GOP slate of candidates for the state house of representatives is passing out bags with the slogan: "It's Time for a Clean Sweep — Elect All 7 GO — Party Candidates for State Representatives."

Tokyo Features Best Chinese Food Specialties

By ROBERT CRABBE

TOKYO (UPI) — Tokyo is the city where you can play Marco Polo at the dinner table.

Adventures in eating lie on all sides and the traveler with an appetite for exotic foods can have a wonderful time.

Among other things, he'll find:

—The finest range of Chinese restaurants found anywhere outside China.

—A whole landscape of exotic eateries that serve the specialties of every county in the Far East—Mongolian mutton, cook-it-yourself, Korean roast beef, Malayan smahat, Indian curry, the works.

The close post - war relationship between Japan and the United States already has given Americans some knowledge of Japanese foods.

Sukiyaki houses are found in many large cities in America. Japanese restaurants in America also serve tempura, but usually give the customer only giant shrimp fried in tempura style.

In Tokyo, you can get amost any kind of tempura cooking. The Japanese eat such things as eels and chrysanthemum leaves cooked this way.

Most foreigners take to tempura easily. The Japanese passion for raw fish, however, is something that seldom rubs off on visitors.

Japanese eat several types of raw fish and lump them under the general name of "sashimi." They don't eat the wole fish raw of course, just a few choice cuts.

Often the slices of raw fish are used to wrap little cakes of rice, and the combination of the two is known as "sushi." Sushi shops are common in heavily Japanese-American Hawaii, and now are starting to be seen on the American west coast.

Whale is widely eaten. There is a lot of variation in the taste, depending mostly on the whale's diet before he got caught. The best whale comes close to passing as beef.

Aside from fish, the Japanese also barbecue chicken on sticks like shish kabob over charcoal. They call it "Yaki Tori," but look out. Besides the meat, the Japanese also eat the chitlins—the chicken's intestines.

Another Japanese proverb:

"The road to happiness is to marry a Japanese woman, live in a Western house, and eat Chinese food."

Many Japanese prize Chinese cooking above their own and the offerings of Chinese restaurants in Tokyo are magnificient.

Unlike Chinese restaurants, Korean style cookeries are not often seen in the western world. Since half a million Koreans live in Japan they are popular.

Korean barbecues are a do-it-yourself event. A small charcoal or gas cooker is placed in the middle of the table and the waitress brings you a bowl of strips of beef marinated in a typical Korean hot sauce. You cook the beef over the fire to suit your own taste, turning it with chopsticks.

Malta Becomes Problem for NATO Group

By ELIE MAISSI

PARIS (UPI) — The North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) has a new headache — what to do about a new country which wants to join it.

That country is the newly-independent Mediterranean island of Malta. It would like to become the 16th NATO member state.

The embarrassing thing is that while Malta would like to join NATO, NATO doesn't want Malta.

Great Britain which originally backed Malta's membership, has withdrawn her support. Most other NATO members are dead set against it.

"CINCAFMED" or Commander-in-Chief, Allied Forces, Mediterranean, is a Briton—Admiral Sir John Hamilton.

Curiously, the forces under his command are almost entirely Italian. The United States Sixth Fleet in the Mediterranean does not come under NATO command. France withdrew most of her Mediterranean fleet from NATO some time ago. Hamilton has only one of two small British units under him.

As long as Malta was a British possession, the status of CINCAFMED and his headquarters offered no problem. Britain is a NATO charter member and the headquarters was located on British territory.

But when Malta was granted independence, CINCAFMED was left dangling in the air — commander of a headquarters in a country that isn't a NATO member and that NATO doesn't want.

It spoke recently of its "readiness to see the existing headquarters of NATO maintained in Malta pending consideration of a new relationship with the organization."

Malta is expected to send a delegation to NATO headquarters in Paris to talk about this future relationship.

The NATO permanent council already has given some consideration to the problem without coming to any decision. But no one, barring Belgium's permanent delegate, Andre de Staercke, seemed able to drum up the slgrtest enthusiasm for admitting Malta.

There is general agreement that a solution has to be found —that the status of so strategic an island as Malta cannot be left open indefinitely.

But no one has come up yet with an answer.

Home Owners Warned About Gyp Artists

NEW YORK (UPI) — For the homeowner who may be considering a second mortgage on his home, a word of warning from the National Better Business Bureau: "Investigate before you sign."

Exploitation of debt - ridden homeowners by second mortgage brokers who offer them an "easy way out" of financial difficulties in spreading rapidly in this country and Canada, the NBBB said in issuing a new leaflet entitled "Advertising of Second Mortgage Brokers."

Allan E. Bachman, executive vice president, stressed the report is not a criticism of the many substantial firms and individuals making second mortgage loans, but is intended to alert the public to the pitfalls in any transactions with the growing numbers of unlicensed brokers, or so-called "money-finders."

"These brokers," Bachman said, "proclaim in provocative advertisements that they can arrange to make substantial sums available to property owners, generally people saddled with heavy debts on consumer purchases."

Told they can reduce their monthly payments 50 per cent or more by "consolidating their debts," over-extended homeowners soon discover they have taken on a debt totaling up to twice as much as the amount they received on the second mortgage, Bachman said. The booklet cites one ad, reading "Home Owner Loans. Need $2,000 or More? Repay Only $35 Monthly Including Interest."

These loans, Bachman said, are secured by second mortgages and the contract usually calls for repayment in monthly installments over a three to five-year period. The brokers do not lend money themselves, but merely place the contracts with a lending company, most often one headquartered outside the state where the mortgaged property is located.

The interest rate usually is within the legal limits — 6 to 8 per cent, depending on the state. However, Bachman said, "borrowers are not told and rarely are aware of the huge fees second mortgage brokers charge for their services.

"The broker's placement fee may range from $500 on a $1,000 mortgage to more than $2,000 on a $5,000 loan. Frequently there is a second broker involved who collects a fee, and there may be fees for appraisal, photographs, "searches," "preparation of instruments," "recordings," and the like. Even if the loan is paid off in advance, none of these charges is refunded or pro-rated."

An Ohio woman, Bachman said, borrowed $3,000 only to find she was obligated to pay back $5,850 in monthly installments of $97.50 over a five-year period. In addition to 6 per cent interest, settlement costs were $2,075.

A New Jersey borrower seeking $4,800 became indebted for fee of $3,900.

In Texas, an elderly couple signed papers obligating them to repay $2,400 in return for $600 to pay of bills and some repairs to their home. They actually received only $300 and the repairs never were comyears was to ay back $6,000.

A Maryland borrower of $500 became obligated to pay back $1,422 in less than two years.

Bachman said second mortgage brokers are exempt from orage brokers are exempt from regulatory authority in most states. While company names often suggest the firms are "investment," "finance," "mortgage," or "bond and mortgage" companies, Bachman said, they are simply money-finding intermediates. Frequently they have no established office but operated from a post office box number and use a telephone answering service.

For his own protection, the NBBB official urged, any homeowner considering a second mortgage should first make inquiry of the financial institution that holds the first mortgage on his home. While it may not be authorized to make a second mortgage loan, it may be able to refinance the first mortgage. In any event, it can refer the customer to reliable sources of funds.

No borrower, he stressed, should sign any document until he has read it carefully, is sure he fully understands its meaning and implications and that all charges and fees are listed and understood. No paper should ever be signed which has blank spaces in it. For best protection, an attorney should be consulted.

Ski Sweaters New Style in Men's Fashion

By WALTER LOGAN

NEW YORK (UPI) — With a deep bow to the girls who made sweaters famous in the first place we must report a new development. Men's ski sweaters have become so splendiferous they have taken the lead from the women as fashion newsmakers.

The collection of ski sweaters for the forthcoming winter sports season is the liveliest and most varied in history. There are massive tweeds in a textured thick - and - thin weave, husky rib knits and deeply brushed wool and mohairs.

Competing with the more subdued colors of the tweeds are bold, bright stripes in a variety of novel treatments from a front blaze of staggered bands in six colors to broad all-around horizontal bands in two or three colors. Newest is a knitted Madras plaid.

The styling emphasis is on action with most manufacturers seeking a genuine pro look. Cuffs are snugly ribbed, raglan sleeves are roomy and there are various necklines which take to turtleneck or ascot fill ins.

American wools are used in meticulously tailored wool jersey shirts in a wide range of bright colors to complement the wool sweaters. There also are double-knit wools and flat knit vests and double - knit blazer jackets for after - ski wear. Suede and leather often is used as trimming.

Some highlights of the Winter collection:

Madras plaids in a shaggy brushed wool mohair in a zip front cardigan with high crew neck closed with rawhide lacing (Alps). The fur look — A loopy texture of wool and mohair that resembles caracul (Kingstone.

White leather piping and soft brushed wool and mohair combine in a cardigan with leather outlining the V neck and with two hip pockets (McGregor-Donger). A bulky white wool pullover with novelty staggered stripes in six bright colors down the front (Puritan).

Bold three - color horizontal stripes around a boat-necked ribbed pullover and more subtle frosty-looking stripes around a tweedy turtle neck (both Kingstone). A deep V-neck with ribbing in a thick-and-thin wool tweed (Catalina).

A big-V neckline in a brushed wool and mohair pullover with a triple bank of layered V-stripes in three colors to create the effect of a V-dip down the entire front (Coventry). Scandinavian sweaters authentically styled by Paul Mage of Copenhagen in low turtle-necks and button-down cardigans in colorful yoke patterns (Robert Bruce).

A saddle shoulder style in lambs wool with a V-neck in "gold dust" which is a light gold with grayish cast. The sleeves and shoulders are one piece to create a horizontal band across the front (Byford of England).

HIDDEN BEAUTY—For cold winds on the ski slopes, this Budapest, Hungary, sweater features a turtle neck that stretches well over the nose.

NCAA Bars Miami Cagers From Meet

By MIKE RATHET
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The NCAA has barred Miami of Florida from participation in its annual post-season basketball tournament and slapped Michigan State and Navy with probationary sentences for recruiting violations.

The steps were taken Wednesday by the NCAA's 18-man policy-making Council, which at the same time fired the first salvo in renewing the battle with the Amateur Athletic Union over the right to sanction track and field competitions.

Four member schools — Western State of Colorado also was involved — were penalied by the NCAA for "excessive financial aid and recruiting violations," but only Miami was barred from post-season activity.

The ruling, which places Miami on probation for one year and bans the school from the NCAA basketball tournament as well as other major post-season affairs cooperating with the NCAA, came about because of an incident last year.

The council said a representative of "Miami's athletic interests" gave a basketball player free room and board and paid for his air travel for several trips made in 1963.

Miami President Harry King Stanford said the violation was unintentional but the school respects the decision and will abide by it.

"The decision of the NCAA was based upon their judgment that the father of a basketball player became 'a representative of the athletic interests' of the university," Stanford said.

"Certainly the assistance which the parent subsequently gave the student, a friend of his son . . . was not an intentional violation."

Michigan State was placed on probation for three years but additional sanctions were suspended because the school corrected the violations after the 1958-59 college year.

Navy received a one-year probation with no additional penalties.

Western State was reprimanded and censured because season activity under the ruling, it gave a wrestler a grant of tuition and fees after he already had a job.

Dayton University was restored to full rights and privileges after completing two years on probation for a basketball recruiting violation.

The Michigan State penalty, which puts the school on probation until Nov. 4, 1967, involved a knotty problem.

The NCAA Committee on Infractions learned about a year ago that a secret fund had existed through which payments were made to football players for tuition, spending money and other purposes. There was, however, no evidence that university officials knew about the fund.

Investigation showed at least 10 football players had received illegal payments during the 1957-59 period before Coach Hugh (Duffy) Daugherty decided the fund was improper and told the athletes the payments would end in 1959.

In the Navy case, the NCAA found that a representative outside the Naval Academy had paid for the transportation of four players from the Norfolk, Bowl game at Dallas.

When the Council finished handing out penalties, it turned to the AAU and signalled the end of the truce which had been arranged by the late Gen. Douglas MacArthur. The truce was to have lasted until the end of the Tokyo Olympic Games.

The right to sanction events has been the disputed point in the struggle between the two groups and has continued for more than three years. The AAU claims the sole right to sanction meets.

The NCAA, however, re-affirmed the position taken in a resolution adopted last January.

The resolution stated:

"The member institutions of the NCAA will support only those meets and tournaments which have obtained sanctions from the established sports federations in basketball, track and field, baseball and gymnastics."

The federations are backed by the NCAA.

The matter is likely to come to a head during the winter indoor track season, in which meets rely heavily on college athletes.

WSC Cuts Student's Job After NCAA Reprimand

GUNNISON, Colo. (UPI)— Western State College said today it had corrected the reason for the official reprimand handed it Wednesday by the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

The NCAA reprimanded and censured the Colorado school for having exceeded the amount of money permitted in aiding a student athlete—a wrestler. The action carried no penalty against any of the school's athletic teams.

Western State athletic director Gene Anderson said the student involved, a sophomore with a wife and child, had earned $197 more than entitled while receiving a grant-in-aid.

He said the student, whom he declined to identify, had obtained an outside job on his own in Gunnison while a freshman last year. The job earned him about $1,100. The student also received a $201 grant-in-aid which included books and tuition for his participation on the wrestling squad.

Anderson said NCAA rules prevent athletes who receive such aid from earning more than enough to pay for room-and-board, books and incidentals. Cost of these items at Western State is about $991 a year, Anderson said.

The school official said the situation had been corrected by reducing the youth's outside work hours which consequently lowered the amount of money he was able to earn.

The school first was reported for the infraction in October, 1963. Anderson and NCAA investigators held a hearing on the matter last June.

A more serious punishment by the NCAA might have affected the Rocky Mountain Conference school's football team which now is ranked 10th among small college teams in the nation by United Press International and holds the conference crown.

Gene Mauch Named NL Manager

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Philadelphia Phillies Manager Gene Mauch was playing golf Wednesday when he learned he had been named National League Manager of the Year for 1964 in the annual Associated Press poll.

"I don't know whether it affected my golf game or not," Mauch said today. "I don't remember how well I played after I found out."

It was the second time in three years the honor was bestowed on the handsome 38-year-old scrapper, who makes his home in nearby Hacienda Heights. He indicated, however, that the title meant more to him the first time he won it, in 1962.

"The circumstances are quite different this time," he said.

Among the circumstances this year:

—With only two weeks left to play, his Phillies had what appeared to be an insurmountable 6½-game lead.

—But they dropped 10 games in a row from Sept. 21 through Sept. 30, then rebounded to win the final two from Cincinnati to finish in a second-place tie with the Reds—one game behind St. Louis. It was the highest finish by Philadelphia since they won the pennant in 1950 under Eddie Sawyer.

So how did Mauch react to the announcement that he took 64 of the 84 votes in The AP poll this year?

"This made me feel as good as anything possibly could," he said cryptically. He declined to elaborate.

Runner-up in the poll was Johnny Keane of the world champion St. Louis Cardinals. Keane, with 16 votes, was followed by Dick Sisler, three votes. Sisler filled in for the ailing Fred Hutchinson at Cincinnati. Hutchinson drew the last vote.

Mauch was praised for his skillful manipulation of his players through most of last season. Only catcher Clay Dalrymple, third baseman Richie Allen and outfielder Johnny Callison were used regularly. Allen, a rookie, was the club's only .300 batsman, finishing at .318.

Huskers Welcome Halfbacks

By United Press International

Nebraska was elated over the return of two halfbacks while Kansas fretted over the loss of a lineman today for the Big Eight game of the week Saturday.

The two teams clash at Lawrence for the conference leadership. Both are 4-0 in league play.

Nebraska halfbacks Bobby Hohn and Harry Wilson were expected to be ready for some duty. Hohn was recuperating from flu while Wilson appeared to be recovering from a bruised knee.

Kansas coach Jack Mitchell was doubtful about tackle Tommy Thompson, veteran offensive starter who has been limping because of chronic knee trouble.

Kansas State coach Doug Weaver expressed concern about his team's ability to contain Arizona State's potent passing attack Saturday at Tempe. He said his charges will face new problems from the Sun Devils, ranked third in the nation in passing.

Missouri was cheered with the appearance in full gear of center Steve Jansen and guard Bobby Brown, who were injured in the Nebraska game. Both were expected to see action in the clash with Colorado. Officials said between 46,000 and 47,000 fans would see the homecoming game at Columbia.

Iowa State coach Clay Stapleton stressed ground and aerial defense in a two-hour session to get ready for Oklahoma.

Syracuse Halfback Ready for Army

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Syracuse University's football team received some good news Wednesday when it was learned that co-captain Billy Hunter would be able to play Saturday when the Orange meets Army at the Yankee Stadium.

Hunter, a 5-foot-10, 190-pounder from South Merchantville, N.J., had been the Orange's starting right halfback before he was forced to the sidelines with an injury in the Holy Cross game.

Larry Zeno To Lead UCLA Against Falcons This Week

By LOY HOLMAN
Gazette Telegraph Sports Editor

A year ago about this time of year a sprightly little quarterback tabbed as "Most dangerous when cornered" tore apart a UCLA line, dodging and scrambling his way for three touchdowns and passing for another as the Air Force Academy soothed a deep wound in their early history with a 48-21 trouncing of the West Coast visitors in Falcon Stadium.

This year the shoe seems to be on the other foot as the Air Force makes ready to fly to Los Angeles for its seventh meeting with the Bruins this Saturday.

Larry Zeno, a 5-10, 189-pound senior quarterback, has been described in just about the same words as was the AFA's Terry Isaacson a season ago. He'll be leading the Uclans as they attempt to take the lead in the series between these schools — and at the same time make up for some of the suffering doled out by Isaacson and his mates during the 1963 season.

"He's probably the best scrambling quarterback we will play this year," AFA coach Ben Martin said this week. "Zeno can do just about anything with a football, and he's at his best at making up his own plays when something goes wrong."

Sounds quite a bit like last year's Falcon record-breaker. And it spells nothing but trouble for the Air Force as they try to pick up a fourth win and even the season's record against this traditional inter-sectional rival.

As for Zeno himself, he may be wanting to settle a personal score with the Cadets. In last fall's encounter, which ended in the worst defeat for a UCLA team in modern history, he was held to but 14 yards rushing and three completions in six passing attempts.

The year before, when the AFA clipped the Uclans 17-11 in an upset, Zeno gained but 37 yards overland and had a 4-for-12 day passing. This was as a sophomore, however, and there wasn't too much thought about it — except by Zeno.

Now he'll have the chance to overcome the frustrations by the Falcons and although this will be a break from league activity for the Bruins, it's a good bet the fancy-dancing UCLA quarterback will be out to square accounts.

Martin openly stated that to defeat UCLA this Saturday the Air Force "would have to stop Zeno. But few teams this year have been able to do it."

So far this season, Zeno climbed to sixth nationally in total offense with 1191 yards in seven games, and he's 18th in passing with 921 yards and a completions record of hitting over half his attempts. He also paces his team in rushing with net 270 yards and a 2.9 average.

Also listed among the national leaders, however, his AFA quarterback Tim Murphy who is 13th in passing (based on his 71 completions) and punter Kenny Jaggers is ninth with a 41.1 yard average.

After four straight weeks on the road, which included three straight defeats until last week's 25-21 upset of California, the Bruins will undoubtedly be eager to please the home town fans in the huge LA Coliseum this Saturday.

The Uclans opened impressively, winning against Pittsburgh (17-12), Penn State (21-14) and Stanford (27-20). But then hit the meat of the schedule against Syracuse, Notre Dame and Illinois — and losing all three as expected.

At times under the Bruins style of sprint-out pass-or-run options off their winged-T offense, it may seem like Zeno is the whole show. And at times this is almost so. But he has some mighty impressive help, too.

Among the other standouts, according to the AFA scouting report, are slotback Mike Haffner and tailback Cronell Champion, both sprinter types who can make any defense dizzy with their tricks. Another up for post-season honors is split end Kurt Altenberg, who came up with the winning TD toss from Zeno against California with little over a minute to play.

In fact, despite a line that will be nearly the same size as the AFA's set of forwards, the Uclans have few weaknesses on offense.

However, the Air Force staff feels there is definite hope for an upset — especially if the team can remain high emotionally after last week's hard-fought 7-0 victory over Arizona which ended a three-game losing skein.

All opponents have been able to move against the UCLA defense, and if last weekend's second half against Arizona is any indication the Air Force should be able to break through the rut of scoring but once per game. The Bruins held Pitt and Penn State to only a pair of scores, but both these teams have proved sub-par this season.

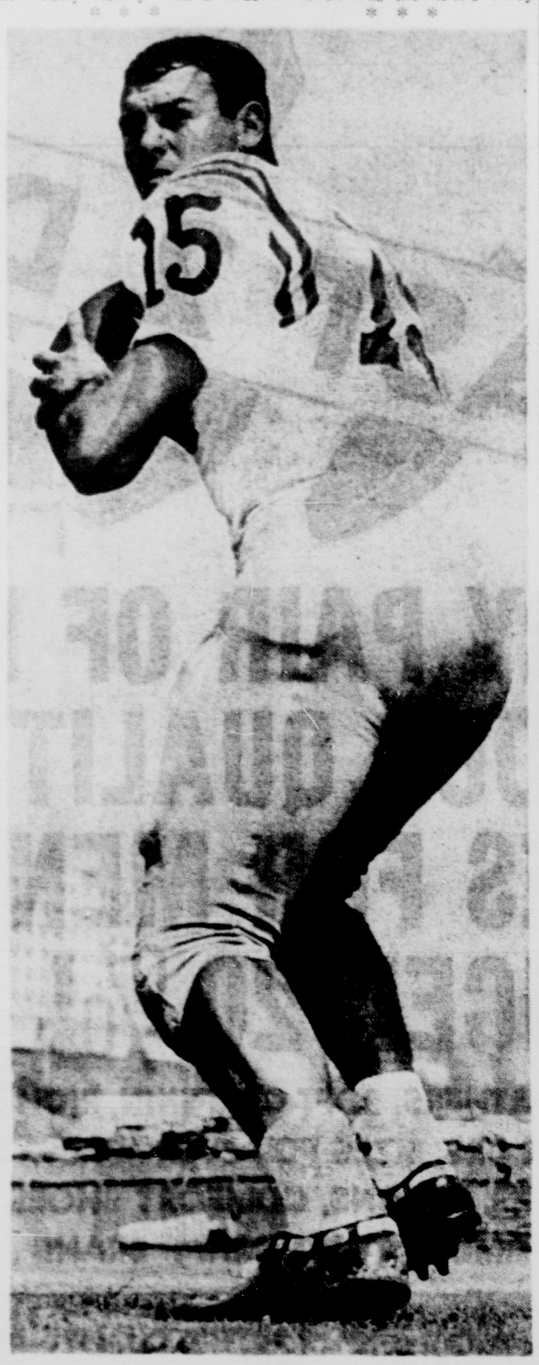
Still burning in the memory of at least some AFA officials is the start of this series with the Bruins — and even last year's lop-sided win didn't erase all of that. The first time the two played was back in 1957 and before the Academy had graduated its first senior class. UCLA blasted the Falcons 47-0 as the AFA was a last-minute substitution on the schedule for a flu-ridden Florida team in the season's opener.

Since that time, though, it's been a spirited but friendly rivalry. Now, with the series squared at three each, both would like to take the lead.

Martin said he and his staff were encouraged by the showing of the Falcons last Saturday, especially in the second half when they dominated play throughout and came within inches of scoring again in the third period. The Cadets played the same strategy opponents have been pulling in the first part of the schedule by controlling the ball, and they finished with a 70-50 advantage in total plays against Arizona.

The AFA coach indicated that he will most likely revert back to the original plan of specialized units for offense and defense, after the switch proved successful in the second half against the Wildcats. He started out playing units both ways, but changed at the intermission to even up the playing time.

Unlike UCLA, however, the Falcons will be ready to play either on offense or defense. The Bruins use a strict platoon system, taking penalites if necessary to get special units into the game under this year's substitution rules.



FACES FALCONS AGAIN—For a third straight year, UCLA quarterback Larry Zeno, a 189-pound senior from Santa Paula, Calif., will be directing the Bruins attack this Saturday against the Air Force Academy in the Los Angeles Coliseum. Zeno, who has yet to be at his best against the Falcons, is considered one of the greatest triple-threat players in UCLA history. He's a top-flight passer, runner and field goal artist.

Bruins May Look Past AFA To Final Conference Games

LOS ANGELES — If the Air Force ever had a chance to sneak up on an opponent this year, it should be Saturday, as the Falcons tangle with the UCLA Bruins.

The talk here on the West Coast is not of Saturday's upcoming game, but whether or not the Bruins can take the measure of Washington and Southern Cal in their last two conference outings and thus capture the host spot in the Jan. 1 Rose Bowl.

Although all Los Angeles area writers figure this possibility much more important than Saturday's Coliseum battle, it's "not so" according to Bruin coach Bill Barnes.

Said Barnes, "We've been waiting all year for another shot at the Air Force, after they handled us so easily last year in Colorado Springs."

Barnes, of course, was referring to the Academy's stunning 48-21 win over UCLA at Falcon Stadium. The 48 points in that game were the most scored against the Bruins since 1930, and the UCLA mentor guarantees his charges will be ready for the Falcons' invasion.

UCLA has been installed as a solid eight-point favorite in this one, but Barnes is fearful due to the fact that his club has not held any opponent to less than 12 points, and the combined opponents have averaged 22 against UCLA.

He was comforted somewhat when reminded that the Cadets have scored more than one touchdown only once this year, and are averaging a paltry 7.4 points per game.

Saturday's game will be the seventh between the two schools, and the Bruins are figured to have a little too much firepower for the Cadets. Leading the charge will be quarterback Larry Zeno, who last week against California, passed Bob Waterfield's all-time UCLA career passing record.

California scribes think Zeno is one of the most under-rated QBs' in the country, and are expecting him to cut loose again this week against the Cadets.

A crowd ranging from 35 to 40 thousand is expected to be on hand in the Los Angeles Coliseum. And if the Bruins aren't careful, the AFA might slip out of town with their third straight win over their West Coast rivals.

Buc Ace Leads Ponce to Victory

SAN JUAN, P.R. (AP) — San Juan rallied for five runs in the eighth inning off Pittsburgh Pirate ace relief pitcher Al McBean and defeated the Ponce Lions 11-7 Wednesday night in a Puerto Rican winter baseball league game.

Pirate teammate Tommie Sisk was the winner as San Juan won its second game in 10 starts.

St. Louis Cardinal left-hander Mike Cuellar held the Mayaguez Indians to only three hits to lead Arecido to a 4-1 victory. Felix Torres, just sent to the minors by the Los Angeles Angels, was the batting star, driving in one run and scoring another.

Official Dramatics

When it comes to counting the bank balance at the end of the season, college football teams undoubtedly find a fond place in their hearts for the weekly television broadcasts of their games. At least the few do who are fortunate enough to be picked by the Big Eye.

And those who think the entire game profits from the lucrative contracts for the already rich schools should have a short talk with the little guys who have yet to be exposed. Especially the ones who have been forced to give up the sport because of lack of funds.

It's the same old story of care-less for the have-nots.

But there is another pet peeve from the this corner. That's the influence the camera has on certain games. A case in point came up just last Saturday when the Falcons of the Air Force and Arizona's Wildcats went through their paces for the benefit of the regional electronic audience and a stadium half-filled with reduced-rate kiddie ticket holders.

It was quite obvious that the officials in this game were well aware of their center stage position before the all-seeing lens. On several occasions they took a bow with a full flourish as the camera clicked.

But when the Air Force was stopped on the one-inch line, short of what could have been a winning score, much credit for the "goal line stand" should have gone to the officials. Instead of calling out whether the goal had been crossed immediately (the only time it could be accurately called) they waited to unpile some 22 players to see where the ball was situated after much pushing and pulling of the ball carrier.

Whether or not the touchdown actually was made is beside the point. But the important thing is that the delay was not only unnecessary but also unprofessional. All it would take is a signal one way or another from the linesman, who either saw the ball break the plane of the goal or else he was out of position.

It may have made for suspense for the armchair TV fans, but for those in attendance it was a display of poor judgment.

REGIONAL

UCLA 20, AIR FORCE 14—Due to a few leaks in the UCLA defense, Air Force should be able to score twice for only the second time this season. But it won't be quite enough to keep up with Larry Zeno and mates who know how to navigate through the Los Angeles smog.

Barickman Gives Linemen Credit For Winning WRL Championship

By CHARLIE DREUX
Gazette Telegraph Sports Writer

Knute Rockne gave them proper recognition four decades ago and today's modern day coach such as Cheyenne Mountain's Guy Barickman carries this attitude on the gridiron.

Give credit to the linemen!

All too often the seven players forming the forward wall on a football team become lost on the sports pages and the four players in the backfield zoomed into the limelight.

Unfortunately, the game of football makes heroes of the fellow carrying or passing the ball and the players working to make this possible are not recognized. That's the way the general sporting public views the game.

But not the coach!

Barickman credits winning the Will Rogers League championship directly to the offensive and defensive effort made by his linemen. Of course the Cheyenne football team, which captured the WRL title undefeated has an outstanding fullback in Greg Cramblit. But without the consistent aggressive play of the Tribe's linemen, the Cheyenne team wouldn't be planning to compete in the state playoffs.

This Saturday afternoon the Indians journey south to tangle with LaJunta in the playoff game for a berth in the State Triple-A playoff.

Cheyenne's linemen will play a big part in this game as the LaJunta team has a potent passing and running attack. Against Lamar, the La Junta team rolled to an impressive victory and racked up 333 yards passing and 223 rushing to completely dominate the contest.

The winner of the Cheyenne-LaJunta game will meet the South Central League champion in the state quarter-finals a week from Saturday, Nov. 14.

Last year the Cheyenne team captured its first state crown when the Tribe defeated Lamar for the Double-A championship. Since then the Indians have advanced to Class-AAA and they face rougher competition.

However, Barickman rates this year's Cheyenne line better than the 1963 edition. Barickman took over the head coaching job at Cheyenne this season and served under Eldon Helm last year as line coach.

Ten linemen have shared the responsibility of forming the Cheyenne forward wall. They are ends Bill Massarand, Mike Conley and end-fullback Jay Swedberg; tackles Craig Fay, Kenn Gardner and John Baumgartel; guards Bill Kinner, Mike Keplinger, Bill Rhodes and Tom McDermott; and center George Stowell.

Baumgartel was injured in last week's game against Canon City and will be sidelined the remainder of the season. In addition to his performance on offense, Baumgartel was a standout on defense.

Barickman indicated that the key to the Indians' offensive attack is their guards and it has been their blocking which has enabled them to outscore their WRL opponents. Kinner is rated as one of the better blockers and plays linebacker on defense. Keplinger, Rhodes and McDermott play on the line on defense.

Massarand has been the Tribe's sparkplug, although the 165-pound end plays linebacker or halfback-safety on defense. Massarand has the best hands of the Cheyenne ends and his speed makes him a pass-catching threat.

At the tackle spot, Fay has been the most reliable and has been labelled "Mr. Steady" by the Cheyenne coaching staff. Fay plays both offense and defense.

And at the pivot, the Indians have the ball-hawking of their ace center-linebacker Stowell. The 155-pound junior Cheyenne center has been outstanding on defense the last few games and Stowell has made some key pass interceptions.

'Big Dipper' Back in Form Again Despite S.F. Loss

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Towering Wilt Chamberlain is a 48-minute man again and San Francisco Warrior Coach Alex Hannum is hoping the big center can weld the Warriors back into a winning club again.

Chamberlain, who missed the Warriors' first five National Basketball Association games because of an inflammation of the pancreas, played the entire game Wednesday night.

But the Warriors lost 105-104 to the St. Louis Hawks.

In the only other game played, the Baltimore Bullets whipped the Pistons 121-108 in Detroit.

"Who ever would have thought we would be 1-6 at this point?" Hannum commented after the Hawks' win over San Francisco.

Wilt, who was visibly weak last week when he returned to the court after more than a month's absence, demonstrated his old style again. He said he was not "particularly tired" after the game.

He contributed 37 points. He demonstrated that his strength had returned by snaring 27 rebounds — a spot where the Warriors had been weak without Wilt.

The Hawks' victory moved them into sole possession of first place in the Western Division with a 5-3 record. They had been tied with Los Angeles for division honors.

Cliff Hagan boosted the Hawks to a 56-52 halftime lead with 10 points.

Bailey Howell and Don Ohl, who were traded by Detroit to Baltimore last summer in an eight-player trade, triggered the Bullets' victory over the Pistons.

With Detroit leading 68-64 in the third period, the pair hit nine straight shots between them — five by Howell. Howell added six free throws as the Bullets opened a 90-85 lead.

Howell's 30 points led Baltimore, which won its third straight — all on the road. Terry Dischinger and Reggie Harding collected 23 points apiece for the Pistons, who lost their fifth in a row.

Adams State QB Leads RMC Stats

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Jim Paronto, Adams State quarterback, holds the lead in total offense in Rocky Mountain Conference football with 586 yards, 465 passing and 121 on the ground.

His teammate, Mike Anderson, is the RMC passing pacemaker with 30 completions in 59 tosses for a .508 average and 476 yards.

Among players carrying the ball at least 60 times, Clyde Wilson, Western State halfback, has posted the best average, 6.5 yards per carry, as well as the highest total with 530.

Don Alley, Adams State end, has grabbed 25 passes for 342 yards and a big lead in that department.

The best punter among those with at least 25 kicks is Jack Richardson of Colorado State with an average of 381. yards for 35 punts.

Quarterback Ed Pittock of Colorado State heads the scoring race with 36 points.

Western State, undefeated in seven games, has a tight hold on all team performances. The Mountaineers have averaged 25.4 points per game while limiting opponents to seven. They show a total offense average of 352.8 yards per game against 181.2 for their foes.

Weber Takes Early Lead In National Bowling Meet

GARDEN CITY, N.Y. (AP) — Dick Weber of St. Louis has taken the early lead in the $60,000 fifth annual national championship of the Professional Bowlers Association.

Weber banged out a 1350 six-game block in his first assault on the pins Wednesday afternoon, and then came back with a 1235 series at night, to take a slim 17-pin lead over diminutive Mike Samardzija of Pontiac, Mich. after 12 games. Weber's total was 2585.

The five day championship test runs through Sunday, with first place worth $7,500, plus the honor of holding bowling's most prestigious title.

Weber won the All-Star title in 1962 and again in 1963, and is runner-up in the PBA average race for the season.

The biggest thrill of the opening day was furnished by slim 25-year-old Jerry Hale of Richmond, Calif. Hale bombed the pins Wednesday night for a six game series of 1425, one of the highest six game totals fired in the PBA this year. The outburst jumped him all the way into 15th place

Several other favorites were among the leaders at the end of the first day.

Veteran Harry Smith of Baltimore had blocks of 1298 and 1264 good for a 2562 total and third place. Jim Robinette, of Falls Church, Va., was fourth with a 12 game total of 2550,

T-Birds, Indians Move Up in Poll

Wasson used last weekend's 33-7 defeat of Palmer to climb to its highest ranking of the year in the weekly Denver Post poll which rates Colorado's prep football teams.

The Thunderbirds, who had never been higher than 10th this fall, moved up to eighth in this week's rankings. They are one of two teams in the top 10 with four losses. East Denver, ranked ninth, has a 6-4 mark while Wasson is 5-4.

Lakewood, one of four unbeaten teams in the top 10, continued to lead for the eighth straight week but the Tigers' previously comfortable lead was trimmed to just eight points by second place Aurora Central following the Trojans' victory over defending state champion Boulder last week.

The Denver League led in top 10 representatives with three (Washington, Jefferson, and East). The Centennial League had two (Aurora Central and Boulder), the Northern League two (Poudre and Loveland), the Jefferson County League one (Lakewood), the Skyline League one (Ranum), and the South Central League one (Wasson).

Cheyenne Mountain, the Will Rogers League champion, also attained its highest ranking of the year moving up to 13th.

Improvement Theme of Ski Club Meeting

Learn to ski, or improve your skiing will be the theme of the ets Ski Club night. Dick Eller, president, announced a double dose of ski instruction will be the program at the regular weekly meeting.

After a short business meeting, a film on Ski-Technique will be shown. Following the film, a dry land teaching session will be held. The instructor will be Kay Freyschlag, former ski coach at Colorado College.

A follow up session will be held later to brush up on Thursday night's teachings. The club will take a trip to Cooper Hill early in December. Beginners will get a chance to practice those things they have learned. Cooper Hill, near Leadville, is one of the finest practice hills in the country.

The meeting will start promptly at 8:30 p.m., Thursdaq, at Patty Jewett Golf Course, at the corner of Prospect and Espanola.

Young America Hockey Registration

Young America Hockey, sponsored by the City Recreation Department and Young America Commission, is now in the second week of registration. Some 220 boys have already registered to play. There are still some openings on teams.

All boys who wish to play hockey this winter must register this week at the Recreation office located at 1400 N. Glen Ave.

Registration for hockey may be done from 8 a.m. until noon, and 1 to 5 p.m. through Friday, Nov. 6. A limited number of participants will be taken from this program.

This activity is open to boys in the fourth through 10th grades. All boys who have not played in Young America hockey must undergo a tryout which will be held on Nov. 14 at 9:45 a.m. at the Broadmoor World Arena.

For any further information, contact the Recreation Department Office, 634-4881.

A's Jimenez Shoots Self In Accident

SAN PEDRO DE MACORIS, Dominican Republic (AP) — Manny Jimenez of the Kansas City Athletics shot himself and his brother when a pistol went off in his hands Tuesday.

The A's outfielder, who is playing winter baseball here, was explaining how a loaded revolver worked when he shot himself through the right hand and his brother in the chest.

Jimenez' brother is listed in critical condition.

Jimenez, who did not have a permit for the gun, was reported by doctors to have no broken bones in his hand but will be out for the rest of the Dominican baseball season.

Tigers Have Chance for First Win In Saturday Contest Against Doane

By TOM CUSHMAN
Gazette Telegraph Sports Writer

"If we can get a full football game out of both our offense and defense, we can hang with this club Saturday," Coach Jerry Carle said Wednesday in reference to Colorado College's final road contest of the 1964 campaign which is scheduled for Saturday night at Crete, Neb. against Doane College.

"Doane is a team a lot like we are," Carle said. "They have won a couple of games, but they have had their problems too. We think this is one game where we can come out on top, if everything goes fairly well."

Doane wouldn't be one of those "must" battles for the average football school — but for CC's battered troopers, it has to fit in that category. The Tigers are now losers of seven straight, including their first six this season, and the Nebraska club may provide their best opportunity to crack through into the win column.

There is the added factor that a victory against Doane would provide CC with a spur, heading into the windup struggle next weekend against Colorado Mines. That confrontation will be the lone extension of competition against Rocky Mountain Conference schools, and it will also mark another edition of one of the nation's oldest rivalries. CC was a member of the powerful small college conference, the RMC, until this fall, but cut the binds due to a philosophy which made it impractical for the Colorado Springs' school to continue with any degree of success.

Mines, although still a member, is actually in the same category and the collision of the two "small-time" Colorado schools still promises to be one of the season highlights for both. Heading into this weekend, neither has won a game and next Saturday climatic struggle could be a battle of the winless.

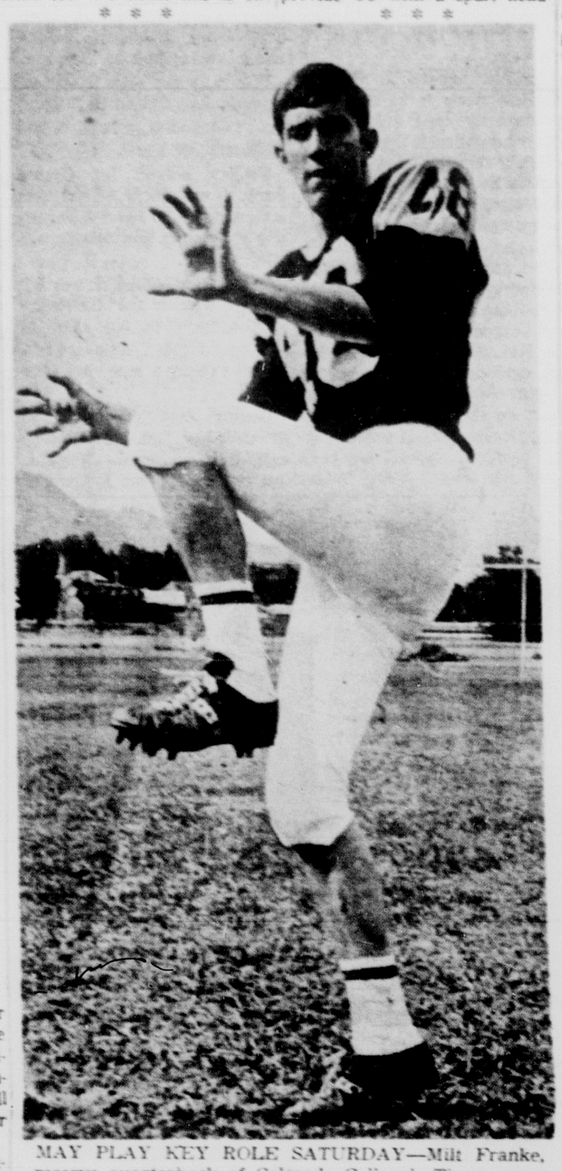
The Tigers, however, have every intention of spoiling that format this weekend and, in truth, their chances are excellent. Carle's squad should make the trip to Crete in what could be its soundest physical condition of the season. A week's layoff following the waxing by a strong Santa Clara, Calif. team has served to heal many bruises.

"We had a really spirited scrimmage Tuesday," Carle said at miwdeek. "There was some of the hardest hitting we have had this year and I really believe our kids will go to Nebraska with the idea of winning. If we put together a solid effort, this is one game we feel we can win."

Tuesday's rugged workout, no matter how uplifting to squad morale, may still have its repercussions in a negative sense. Quarterback Mike Denson, a starter for the past two contests, suffered a shoulder injury which the CC staff feared might sideline him Saturday. A more accurate medical report was due later in the day Wednesday.

If Denson is out, the quarterbacking chores are scheduled to be divided between Warner Denson, and another second year man, Milt Franke. The only other change in the backfield will see junior Ron Taylor, a 170 pound swiftie, moving into the left-halfback position. Taylor has been impressive in recent workouts and he will be replacing senior Mike Mestek. Sophomores Bob Stapp and Ray Jones are slated for the other starting spots, with Stapp going at right-half and Jones at fullback.

Although CC is 0-6 at this point in 1964, Doane is no more impressive when comparing the competition. The Nebraska school has a 2-5-1 mark, but has dropped decisions to Hastings, Nebraska Wesleyan, and Concordia. Those three schools also downed CC and the margins of defeat were fairly similar. Doane's two victories were posted over Peru, Neb. College and Yankton.



MAY PLAY KEY ROLE SATURDAY—Milt Franke, reserve quarterback of Colorado College's Tigers, may be called on to take over much of the signal-calling duties Saturday when the local team meets Doane College at Crete, Neb. Regular quarterback Mike Denson suffered a shoulder injury during a practice session this week and if he is unavailable Saturday, the chores will be split between Franke and Warner Reeser. All three CC quarterbacks are sophomores.

Nebraska, Notre Dame Stingy With Defenses

NEW YORK (AP) — Nebraska's defense has yielded only 966 yards in seven games this season. That's an average of 136.6 per game—69.8 by rushing and 67.7 by passing. Notre Dame has held opposing runners to a mere 30.5 yards but has been slightly more vulnerable to passing. Georgia Tech has given up only 3.7 points a game.

Beat 'em? You might as well stay on the bench.

They are three teams that don't subscribe to the theory that 1964 is the Year of the Bomb in college football. Another is Kent State, which has thrown fewer passes than any other major college team and has been just as determined in its opposition to passes by others.

Defense statistics released today by the NCAA Service Bureau show Nebraska as No. 1 in total defense, No. 2 in rushing defense and No. 6 in pass defense. Notre Dame, far ahead of all rivals in defense against rushing, is seventh in total defense. Auburn and Syracuse, second and third in total defense, have been strong against running.

Georgia Tech has allowed only 26 points in seven games. Second is Villanova with 26 in six for a 4.3 average. The other departmental defense leader is Mississippi, with an average of 45.6 yards of its 32 punts.

Kent State hasn't been blasted by passing bombs so far. Its opponents have thrown only 69 passes and completed 25, a .362 percentage. In yardage, they've averaged only 50.7 a game. But Kent's own passing has been just as ineffective—57 attempts and 26 completions.

The pass defense leaders could take a warning from Oklahoma State. Kent and the next four teams in line, Toledo, Florida, Southern Methodist and San Jose State, all are scheduled to go against top flight passers in the next couple of weeks.

Oklahoma State was No. 2 in pass defense last week, then ran up against Tulsa's great combination of Jerry Rhome and Howard Twilley. Now the Cowpokes are 92nd.

Pirate Offensive Adds Airpower

By CHARLIE DREUX
Gazette Telegraph Sports Writer

Chuck Haering's young-but-seasoned St. Mary's footballers displayed potent airpower last weekend in wrapping up their seventh Denver Parochial League triumph when they bombarded visiting Holy Family by a considerable margin.

Meanwhile, the DPL pacesetters Mullen had to come from behind to pull out a 19-13 squeaker to remain one step ahead of the pennant-hopeful Buccaneers.

Had the Mullen team succumbed to highly regarded Machebeuf last weekend, the Pirates would be deadlocked along with the Mustangs and Regis for the league leadership.

As it stands now, the Bucs must await the outcome of the Mullen-Regis finale game a week from Sunday, Nov. 15. A Mullen victory would destroy any further chance at the DPL title and the Pirates would have to settle for undisputed second place, while the perennial power Regis finished third.

Should the Raiders arise to the occasion to upset the explosive Mullen aggregation it would throw the championship into a three-way tie for first place and force a single game playoff for the state parochial playoff berth. The winner of that game would meet the victor of the Southern Paroke League for the state championship.

The Pirates are idle this week end and conclude their DPL slate a week from Sunday against St. Francis. A victory here would give the Bucs an 8-1 won-loss loop record and a 9-1 overall mark including a victory over last year's state Double-A champion Cheyenne Mountain. They lost that single outing to Mullen, 13-6.

In reviewing last Sunday's 41-0 triumph over Holy Family, Haering said this was the first time the Pirates really moved the ball on offense, especially in the air.

The Bucs' front-line quarterback Jerry Knauf directed the offensive attack which saw Haering use 15 different running backs. In addition to making the running offense jell, Knauf clicked with his receivers as the St. Mary's ace passer struck with remarkable authority in the air.

Knauf completed all five attemps for 95 yards including two TD aerials to his slot back Chris White and end Sal Peralta. Sub-quarterback Jim Rhue enable the Pirates to enjoy a perfect day when he fired a 21-yard bullet to LeRoy Eckoff for the sixth pass completion.

While the St. Mary's offensive team was grinding 241 net yards rushing via the running of Sam Zavatti, Tom McCarthy, Gary Dobson and a host of others, the defensive specialists the Outlaws" contained the Holy Family team to eight yards rushing.

This was the third game the "Outlaws" stifled at DPL team's rushing attack but it was the lowest net yards. The previous low was 19 yards in a earlier game this season.

St. Mary's "Outlaws" have been a big factor in the success enjoyed this season by the Pirates and this is quite remarkable for a young team with only five returning lettermen.

Navy Coach Says Don't Fuel Rivalry

By HERB THOMPSON

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — Navy Coach Wayne Hardin says someone is trying to "manufacture stories" to fuel a football rivalry with Maryland that doesn't need any fueling.

He cited as examples:

—A published story that Navy and Maryland coaches refused to exchange interviews with writers this week at their respective news conferences one even talked to me about it," Hardin said.

—A purported report on television that Navy has a sign in its dressing room saying "Maryland Must, Army Necessity." "There is no such sign," Hardin said. "We've got enough troubles without trying to create any."

"Someone is just manufacturing stories . . . that always happens to a losing team," Hardin complained Wednesday.

Navy and Maryland, both of them losing teams, meet Saturday at College Park in a natural rivalry that already has sold out Byrd Stadium with some 40,000 expected.

It turned out that the sports publicity men at the two schools, Bill Dismer at Maryland and L. Budd Thalman at Navy, were probably the unwitting gremlins behind the stories.

A news release from Dismer, and not a sign in the Navy dressing room, had proclaimed the game a "must" for Maryland and a "necessity" for Navy in light of records of 2-5 and 2-4-1, respectively.

Thalman said he canceled the usual telephone interview with Navy's opposing coach as unnecessary this week since Nugent was holding a similar press conference for Maryland writers only a day before.

As for the game itself, it figures to be a rollicking contest without any spurious propaganda.

Navy shellacked Maryland 42-7 here last year with a team that wound up No. 2 in the national rankings.

Baseball Heads Discuss Expansion

By JOE REICHLER
Associated Press Sports Writer

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Baseball commissioner Ford Frick's long dream, expansion of both the National and American leagues into 12-team circuits, will get a full airing here in a three-day summit meeting of club owners and general managers starting today.

The expansion theme is high on the agenda, along with a number of other important items such as the proposed switch of the Milwaukee franchise to Atlanta, presentation of a weekly television baseball spectacular for the 1965 season, completion of a new concept in minor league operations, a broadening promotional effort and a change in the present bonus rule.

Another important piece of business likely to be discussed, although not on the agenda, is the commissionership itself.

Frick already has notified owners he will not seek reelection when his current seven-year term expires next September.

A preliminary committee headed by the two league presidents, Joe Cronin of the American League and Warren Giles of the National, has been screening candidates to succeed the 70-year-old Frick.

Among the names being considered are Gen. Maxwell Taylor, currently special envoy to South Viet Nam; Judge Robert Cannon of Milwaukee and Cronin himself.

Whatever possible action may be taken here, it is hardly likely anything will be made public until the annual winter league meetings at Houston at the end of this month.

Frick, one of the first of the baseball officials to arrive, made that pretty clear Wednesday night.

"This meeting has been called in order to establish policy for an over-all program that can be presented to the Houston meetings for legislation," he said.

Although Frick acknowledged that such matters as expansion, franchise shifts, minor league realignment and television would be discussed, he reiterated:

"We cannot adopt anything here. We are only going to put together a program that's to be whipped into shape legislatively for long range purposes."

It was learned, however, that Frick will attempt to convince the owners of the necessity of expansion in the near future, possibly by 1966.

The commissioner has preached such a plan for some time but the recent action taken by the Braves and agitation by several other clubs to shift their franchises have caused him to move his target date closer.

It is Frick's plan to create new major league teams in Seattle, Oakland, Dallas-Fort Worth and either Atlanta or Milwaukee, depending upon where the Braves eventually wind up.

The commissioner is certain to meet with serious opposition, especially from Cronin and Giles, who do not feel the time is right.

"The commissioner has an admirable thought," said Giles, "but let's be realistic about it. Where will we be able to get the players for four new clubs even if the cities were available?

"Expansion now or in the near future would be like putting ourselves in a straight jacket. There are other and more urgent problems confronting us at the present time. I can foresee expansion at some future time. But certainly not within the next two or three years."

The promotional endeavor was discussed at length at a general managers' meeting in Pennsylvania last week.

The general managers, it has been learned, brought back some bad news to the owners, to the affect that the proposed Monday night TV spectacular idea has hit a snag.

Two major networks, NBC and ABC, reportedly advised they could not relinquish the programming time Monday or any other night. CBS already had announced that despite its new involvement in baseball with ownership of the Yankees, it was not interested.

An alternative suggestion switching the game to Saturday afternoon was made, but that would conflict with NBC's and CBS's game-of-the week. A solution still must be found.

Unwanted Twilley Leads Receivers

By BOB HARING

TULSA, OKLA. (AP) — A little guy that nobody wanted is college football's top pass catcher and scorer this year who believes he's going to set a national record.

He is Howard Twilley, 180 pounds of competitive drive bundled into a 5-foot-10 package. He's one reason Tulsa University is the country's top passing team and Hurricane quarterback Jerry Rhome is the nation's leading passer.

"He was the little fellow everybody else passed up," Tulsa Coach Glenn Dobbs said. "I had to be sold on him."

Twilley played for Galena Park, Tex., High School and wanted to go to nearby University of Houston. But nobody was interested.

"They didn't think I was big enough to go to the University of Houston," Twilley said. At 159 pounds he admitted "I wasn't exactly a blue chip prospect."

Houston may have regretted its decision Oct. 10. Twilley caught six passes for 72 yards and one touchdown and scored five extra points as Tulsa whipped Houston 31-23.

Coming to Tulsa—which took him at the urging of an old grad in Houston—"is about the greatest thing that ever happened to me," Twilley said.

He broke into the line-up last year as a linebacker. He switched to offense after John Simmons, Tulsa's top receiver, was hurt— and his defensive days are over.

But Dobbs says Twilley could be one of the top defensive players in this part of the country if he weren't so valuable as a receiver.

With four games left to play, Twilley needs 14 receptions to break the season record of 70 set by Larry Elkins of Baylor last year and another 292 yards would break the mark of 1,007 yards gained by Vern Burke of Oregon State in 1962.

He also leads national scoring with 68 points on eight touchdowns and 20 extra points—both catching and kicking—and could become the first end ever to top point-makers.

But he's not just shooting for records.

"Statistics are wonderful things to look at Monday afternoon," he said. "But they don't mean anything unless you win."

Milwaukee Cuts Denver From Farm System

DENVER (AP)—The Milwaukee Braves terminated their working agreement with Denver of the Pacific Coast League Wednesday night. But Denver officials said they were sure it was "only temporary."

General Manager Eddie Glennon said, "I feel certain we'll renew our agreement for the 1965 season."

Cal Kunz, president of the Bears, said the termination announced in a letter from Milwaukee was "merely a formality and that the Denver club has nothing to be concerned about."

Kunz said the action is believed to be a part of current litigations concerning the Braves shifting from Milwaukee to Atlanta. The move is being contested legally by Milwaukee city officials.

Bills Rates Tops in Both Loops

NEW YORK (AP) — The Buffalo Bills, whose idea of how to play football is grind it out but don't give anything out, are the only undefeated and untied team in pro football. The American Football League's statistics show why.

In the team offense and defense figures released today, the Bills are No. 1 in all but one of the major categories and a very good second in that one.

With big Cookie Gilchrist showing the way, Buffalo has the best AFL running attack, averaging 165.7 yards per game and 4.5 yards per attempt. Add to the 1,326 yards the Bills have gained by rushing, a total of 1,980 yards on 102 completed passes and you get 3,036 yards and an impressive average of 413.2 yards per game.

The Oakland Raiders are first in passing offense with 2,170 yards on 151 completions, averaging 271.2 yards a game. That gives them second in total offense with a 361.6 yards per game.

On defense Buffalo has yielded only 2,134-yards in eight games — 632 by rushing and 1,502 by passing for an over-all average of 266.7 yards per game. They're first all the way. In addition, the Bills have been penalized only 23 times for 233 yards, another No. 1 figure.

Only in a couple of places can the Bills be faulted. They have fumbled 15 times and lost seven of them. Their pass completion percentage is next-to-lowest and their percentage of interceptions is the highest.

Coach Wary Of Broncs' Low Record

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — The San Diego Chargers are 5-2-1 and the Denver Broncos are 1-7, but Charger Coach Sid Gillman is still playing it close to the chest as the teams prepare for their American Football League encounter Sunday.

"Just a year ago, Denver did us in by a 'little' score of 50-34.

"The Broncos are capable of beating anyone at any time. I just hope it's not our time," Gillman said.

The Chargers, as usual, will utilize either Tobin Rote or John Hadl at quarterback. Hadl has led the league champs to four straight victories.

Gillman pointed to halfback Paul Lowe in emphasizing the importance of off-season training.

"Without question he is one of the finest running backs in the business, but even when he has been healthy, he has not practiced well," Gillman said.

His timing is off and he doesn't hit the holes properly.

"Paul's play is an indication that a player who waits to get into shape until he reports for training is making a horrible mistake.

"I think he realizes now that the less you do durirg the off-season the greater mistake you are making."

Liquor License Bribe Defendant Is Found Guilty

By MALCOLM STEPHENSON

NEW YORK (AP) — Ralph Berger, Chicago real estate broker and public relations man, has been convicted as the go-between in a plot to pay a $50,000 bribe for a liquor license for the Playboy Club here.

Berger, 60, a former Chicago night club operator, also stands convicted of the same role in a $10,000 bribe plot to get a liquor license for The Tenement, a Manhattan supper club.

He remains free in $2,500 bail pending sentencing in a month in State Supreme Court. He could be given up to two years in prison and a $1,000 fine.

His lawyer, Joseph Brill, said that after sentence is imposed "we will most certainly appeal."

A jury found Berger guilty late Wednesday after two hours and 25 minutes of deliberation. The trial lasted 19 court days before Justice Mitchell C. Schweitzer and the jury of nine men and three women.

Berger's face turned a deep red as he heard jury foreman Frank J. Lucas, an actor, reply with a ringing "we have" when the court clerk asked if the jury had reached a verdict. Lucas announced "guilty" to both conspiracy counts in the indictment.

Berger did not testify. The defense did not call any witnesses.

The defense lawyer, summing up his case, described Berger as a fall guy. Asst. Dist. Atty. Jeremiah B. McKenna called Berger a "merchant of corruption" who scouted bribes for Martin C. Epstein, ousted and indicted chairman of the State Liquor Authority.

Epstein, 72, charged with accepting bribes and failing to report the money on his state income tax returns, has been reported too ill in Miami, Fla., to be brought here and put on trial. More than a dozen other persons have been indicted in connection with the liquor license scandal involving many establishments.

Republican Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller fired Epstein from his $24,000-a-year post in 1962 for refusing to waive immunity as a witness before a Manhattan grand jury investigating charges of graft and other corruption in SLA operations. Rockefeller had appointed Epstein, a veteran GOP district leader in Brooklyn.

Signing a waiver of immunity — required by law of all public officials and employes — would have made Epstein liable to possible prosecution on the basis of his grand jury testimony.

Average Video Set in Use Over Five Hours

NEW YORK (AP) — The average television set — and there are now almost 62 million of them in almost 52 million American homes — was in use for 5 hours and 36 minutes a day during the two- week period ending Oct. 11, according to the latest Nielsen estimate. A year ago the estimate for the same period was 5 hours and 6 minutes.

That statistic pretty well demolishes the frequently expressed opinion — maybe it is just a wan hope — that the vast audience after all these years is finally becoming more selective about its viewing. It looks as if we are watching it more, even if we do hear more complaints about enjoying it less.

As far as our favorite viewing hours are concerned, the Nielsen figures indicate that between 6 and 7 p.m. some 41 per cent of our sets are turned on. Between 7 and 8, it climbs to 54 per cent and moves up to around 64 per cent during the next two hours. Then it drops off sharply to 52 per cent from 10 to 11.

In our seasonal enjoyment of television, Nielsen repeatedly confirms that we watch more during the winter. Last January and February the average American television set was in use about six hours a day.

It looks as if one of the season's first casualties will be NBC's "Bill Dana Show," which probably will disappear from NBC's Sunday night lineup some time in December. Another — and a big one — in trouble is "90 Bristol Court," the economy- size package of three situation comedies under one title.

Replacement for the latter is likely to be an hour Western which will put Chuck Connors back in a 10-gallon hat and blue jeans, plus a half-hour comedy.

DeGaulle May Seek Talks With Johnson

PARIS (UPI) — President Charles De Gaulle was reported Wednesday to be seeking top-level consultation with the United States—perhaps with President Johnson—before a final decision on a multi-lateral nuclear force.

Responsible French sources said such talks also should touch on all aspects of NATO, on which the United States and France are increasingly at odds.

French officials said Johnson's landslide election victory appears to have cleared the way for the controversial U. S. proposed multilateral nuclear force (MLF). That issue is poisoning U. S.-French relations more than any other at the moment.

Under present plans, Johnson would not visit Europe before his inauguration Jan. 20. French sources Wednesday voiced hope that talks might begin before then—even if they did not involve Johnson and De Gaulle at the outset.

French sources said De Gaulle wants there to be no doubt in Johnson's mind that he considers the nuclear force militarily senseless and politically inadvisable.

Milan Building Safest Subway In The World

By Francesco Mennella

MILAN (AP) — Italian experts say Milan's new heavily automated subway will be one of the safest in the world — whatever mayhem breaks loose in the engineer's cabin.

The $72 million eight - mile underground railway crossing the city's northern sector will be formally opened here Nov. 1.

The robots will be lurking in the background.

It's been so arranged that if a driver gets absent minded or becomes suddenly ill, nothing dreadful can — or should — happen.

There is a small panel in his cabin carrying five lights of different colors.

These reproduce the colors of traffic signals stationed along the line which control the speed of trains. If the driver fails to detect the lights or slumps unconscious over the controls, a shrill acoustic signal will go off is his ear. If he fails to hear that, the robots take over. An automatic system will ensure that the speed of the train is properly regulated or halted if need be.

There are 21 stations on Milan's No One subway—all connected with a central "brain" room where traffic control officers will be on constant watch. The "brain" room puts out feelers along the track by telephone and a closed-circuit TV system.

The traffic controller on duty can at any moment cut off the current by the throw of a switch — should a train move out of pattern or someone fall on the line.

An electronically operated panel in the control room will show the positions of all trains at all times.

Ticket vendors on the No. One line will also be automatic —slot machines operated by a coin to open barriers and let passengers down to the platform.

The up-to-date methods contrast oddly with the surroundings—soil that has known 2,000 years of history. The diggers of this first subway tunnel burrowed their way through ancient buriel grounds and the foundations of old and treasured monuments.

Near the ancient cathedral, they carved a path through a ruined church and an old burial ground. Further on, they had to cut through the foundations of the massive Sforza Castle.

They also found dungeons thought to have been used as prisons and torture chambers by Renaissance princes.

It has taken eight years to complete this first subway line, which is regarded as a boon in this city of 1,600,000 people. Surface traffic has slowly been grinding to a halt.

Eventually, the subway will become a network of four lines, covering 25 miles of track below the bustling industrial city. But that will take another decade.

RABBI ASKS BAN

FALLSBURG, N.Y. (UPI) — A rabbinical ban on conversions to Judaism was urged recently by a prominent Orthodox rabbi, Rabbi David L. Silver, of Harrisburg, Pa.

Rabbi Silver told the annual convention of the Yeshiva University Rabbinic Alumni that all rabbinic organizations in the United States should declare a general ban on all conversions "in order to stem the tide."

"The situation has reached such dangerous proportions that unless there be a mighty counter thrust, the American Jewish community will be snowed under by an avalanche of part Jews," he said.

Hewlett-Packard Operates Here

The Hewlett - Packard corporation has opened its Colorado Springs division.

This is one of the most exciting developments in manufacturing to come to our city and we wish to extend the hand of fellowship to this fine, pioneering industry.

The Hewlett-Packard firm was organized in 1939 and in 25 years has become one of the nation's leaders in the manufacturing of electronic measuring equipment.

Its precision instruments are extensively used in this nation and in some 70 other foreign states. The customers for Hewlett-Packard devices range from radio and television studios to chemical laboratories, research facilities, banks, hospitals, aircraft, steel mills, space installations and nuclear development.

Hewlett - Packard now has 14 manufacturing plants, including the one here. Two are in Western Europe, one in Japan and the other 11 are scattered throughout the United States, mostly in California. In all, some 7,000 employes are working steadily in this industrial giant which now has an annual sales volume of more than $125 million.

The story of Hewlett - Packard is the true story of American free enterprise.

The two young men who started the venture, David Packard and William R. Hewlett, began operations in a garage in a residential district in Palo Alto. Fortunately, zoning and planning people didn't put them out of business when they were young and vulnerable. Their total capital investment at the begining was listed as $538.

But Hewlett and Packard began developing and pioneering. They devised new instruments, as many as 20 in a single year, and took seven-league strides right along with advancing technology in the United States.

Their sole measure of determining whether they were offering something the market wanted was to examine each new development in this light: "Will it make a contribution?" If it would, they built it. If not, they didn't.

The two young men turned out to be not only giants of innovation, but giants in business and industry. Indeed, their exploits became proverbial.

Years ago, we recall our joy at "discovering" a story about these two young men who set up business in a Palo Alto garage, and who were on their way to financial and business success. These men are an example of the fact that industry, pioneering and hard work can still bring fortunes to those in this country who have something to offer and aren't afraid of digging in to produce it. Now Hewlett-Packard is an integral part of the growth and the future of our city, and we are enormously pleased.

Credit must also be given to two of the young men of the team. One of them came here in 1962 to head up the first Hewlett-Packard operation in a rented building. His name is George F. Fredrick. He remains on in Colorado Springs as manager of engineering activities. The other is Cort Van Rensselaer, a long-time employe of Hewlett-Packard who is the Colorado Springs division manager.

The principal product to be turned out in Colorado Springs is the justly famous Hewlett Packard oscilloscope, probably the most widely used instrument of its kind in the world for the purpose of electronic measuring. The other major product line to be locally produced is what is called the "pulse generator," a device that provides precisely controlled signals which are used in conjunction with oscilloscopes for testing the behavior of electronic circuits and mechanical devices of various sorts.

Hewlett-Packard is a producer of technical instruments. But our joy in having them with us isn't technical at all. It's just old-fashioned warmth in knowing that these fine people are here, building a fine product in a wonderful setting and employing many constructive people in various fields.

Congratulations to Hewlett - Packard. May your activities grow and prosper.

Fear of Automation

The folks who don't understand economics constantly rail at automation.

They've been doing this ever since the first days of the Industrial Revolution. In fact, moderen labor unions got started at that time, by taking advantage of the superstition and fear among workers, and by prophesying doom as a result of the new power machines and tools that were beginning to make their appearance.

It was argued loudly that every "labor saving device" that could be introduced would throw men out of work. This is the same litany that one hears today, in spite of all the evidence to the contrary. The fact is that prior to the development of power tools, unemployment not infrequently included as much as 50 per cent of a given nation's population. Starvation, want and privation covered the globe. People could not find enough to eat, enough to wear, decent homes to live in, and so on.

It took the harnessing of great sources of energy to multiply human effectiveness in beating back the primitive forces of raw nature by means of which man had just barely subsisted for thousands of years.

Automation (improvement in tools of production; specifically: introduction of power tools and machines) does not create unemployment. It redistributes the labor force but provides more jobs than ever before. Meanwhile, it multiplies the amount of goods and services on the market and makes possible higher standards of living for all, including all workers.

Let's take a few figures.

Between 1950 and 1960, according to some accepted estimates, 18,000,000 American jobs were eliminated by machines. However, in 1960 there were 7,000,000 more jobs available for Americans than there ever were before. Thus, on the record, automation and our expanding economy, introduced 25,000,000 jobs as it was doing away with 18,000,000. The jobs were different. But there were more of them.

We can presume that blue-collar jobs are being eliminated at much the same pace today. But there is a growing list of unfilled jobs in other categories.

Back - breaking, soul-destroying, repetitious jobs are being eliminated in favor of better jobs and higher wages. Take a look at the want ad columns in any newspaper. Hundreds of jobs are seeking workers constantly. There hasn't been a day within memory wherein some employer wasn't seeking for a worker somewhere.

Contrast American agriculture (automated) with Russian agriculture (non - automated). Five generations ago, some 70 per cent of our employed work force labored next to the soil on our farms and ranches. Today some 7 per cent of our work force is thus employed.

In Russia, even today, with a population of more than 216 million, better than 60 per cent of the Russian work force labors on the land in their many collective farms. Russia has a monstrous food problem. The food in the Soviet Union is scarce and of poor quality and high in price.

In America, the contrary is true. Our prices, it is true, are far higher than necessary, due to government subsidy payments, taxation and regulation. But even so our prices are lower than those in the Soviet Union in terms of real wages. But we have a surplus in many food commodities and our problem seems to be to get rid of our surpluses. Overeating is a problem of vast proportions in this country, as contrasted with starvation or near-starvation elsewhere.

Remember, the only difference between a Chinese coolie and an American truck driver, is the truck. A truck is nothing more than an automated ox cart.

It is said that Teddy Roosevelt, who probably never heard the word "automation" was once watching some steam shovels scoop up earth at a big dam site and someone commented: "Think of the jobs we could create if we put men in there with shovels, eh Teddy?"

"Yes," responded Teddy. "And we could multiply that number by thousands if we equipped them with teaspoons."

A shovel is an automated teaspoon. A steam shovel is an automated spade.

The idea that power tools and power machines are going to eliminate employment is fatuous and rests upon ancient fears and superstitions.

NEW DEAL

To the Editor:

Thank you for publishing my letter of a few weeks ago regarding the book, "A Voice Not An Echo," in which you admit that I was correct about the cotton plow-up in 1934, which gave the lie to the statement in the book that it was ordered by the New Deal.

I had not thought to carry this argument further, but now comes a splash by your protege, Mr. Porter, titled "Thirty Years' War — and Then Some," in which Mr. Porter makes a lot of wild statements about how the Teller County stockmen were forced against their will to allow the fieldmen, flunkies, and lackeys who went in droves to enforce the edicts of the bureaucrats, and shoot down the stockmen's cattle without their consent, not even allowing the hungry people to eat the meat, etc., etc.

There is not one word of truth in his story. I do not claim to be a witness to how the elimination of cattle took place in Teller County, Colorado, but I was not only a witness but a participant in the selling to the government a percentage of our cattle at the current market value. The government in turn loaned us money to buy feed for the cattle which we kept, just on our note. Furthermore, the government allowed anyone who participated to redeem any cattle at no cost, which was fit to butcher for his own use or to give to anyone else to butcher and use for food, and many were so used. Some which the government purchased were destroyed, others were retained and later sold to farmers on credit in the rehabilitation program which had been set up by the government, and this all came about in the same manner in which the cotton production was cut down. There was not enough feed in the country to feed all these cattle through the winter. This was how it was done in Independence County, Ark., where I lived.

Mr. Porter should be retired from his crude propaganda field of writing. Let him go back to his poetry where he does best. The New Deal program saved many a little farmer like myself from having his farm sold under mortgage foreclosure, as had been done under the Republican administration. Poor people who condemn the New Deal need political education, not lies of propaganda. Only lies are paid for, the truth is always free.

N. J. CARTER

Editor's note: Mr. Porter and others, concerned with the advance of socialism, cry out with wounded hearts at the devastation and destruction which occurred as a result of stockmen accepting the edict of the federal government concerning the destruction of crops and livestock.

Mr. Carter is correct in stating that a stockman did not find himself "forced" to accept the government edict. But once he accepted it, then he was compelled to submit to its terms. The extent and severity of the exaction went beyond what many stockmen thought it would, and they cried out at the time, in frustration and exasperation. But they had accepted and were powerless to reverse the rule. Small farmers and ranchers may not have been "forced" to the wall by their own over extensions of credit, because of federal intervention; however, the taxpayers of the nation were forced to put up the money that was handed over to farmers who had been indiscreet and who had piled up debts far larger than they could pay back.

This debt, enlarging enormously in depression days, has been growing ever since until this nation now stands with a gold reserve only large enough to cover approximately two thirds of our national commitments abroad. Meanwhile, domestic commitments to repay in gold were repudiated and the American investors defrauded of their reserves.

Today, the nation stands on the brink of economic ruin occasioned in part by the way the farmers and ranchers, both large and small, turned to the government to bail them out of their difficulties.

Mr. Porter may have overemphasized one phase of the compulsion used. But, if so, he has not said enough about the general enforcement against the taxpayers, the economic slough of despondency it created, and the precarious situation that confronts us at the moment, thanks to the flirtation with socialism in high office which continues at the present time unabated.

To the Editor:

At a recent meeting in New York, Beth Frantz, our Denver representative, gave a glowing account of your newspaper's coverage of our presentation of "America's Junior Miss," Linda Felber.

We at Eastman Chemical Products, Inc., want to express our appreciation and thanks for your help in making her visit to Denver so successful. The publicity was excellent.

As you know, I'm sure, Eastman was one of the sponsors of the pageant this past year. If the 1965 Junior Miss is in your area next year, I trust we can have your fine assistance again.

CHARACTERISTICS

To the Editor:

Are you a man or a woman? The Bible says that "God is no respecter of persons," or that He does not judge by the physical being, so there must be another standard.

Let us make a list of the characteristics generally accepted as being representative of each sex, and see where we stand as individuals.

MEN: Bold. . .extrovert. . . strong of character. . .daring . . .inclined to clumsiness. . . speaks his mind . . not inclined to be diplomatic. . .prefers fighting to running. . .takes chances (has faith in his ability to handle a situation). . .loves to be self-supporting. (You can make the list as long as you like.)

WOMEN: Retiring. . .introvert. . .weak. . .prefers "security". . .seeks to practice grace . . .seldom says what she's thinking. . .prefers diplomacy . . .prefers peace at any cost. . . tries never to leave anything to chance (makes every effort to insure security for life). . . prefers being supported (preferably by a husband).

Now, the point of interest is this, those who have the characteristics listed under MEN, are the leaders of the world, while those who have the characteristics listed under WOMEN are those who need someone to look after them. God made it that way, and I don't think you or I are going to change it.

There is a scripture in Proverbs that worried me for many years, because it seemed inconsistent; it says, "Give not thy strength unto women nor thy ways to that which destroyeth kings" (Proverbs 31:3). Now I know that God intended man's strength and woman's weakness to complement and complete

Pay Raises

By H. E. KERSHNER, L.H.D.

We hear a lot of talk about inadequate incomes of poor government employees, but the fact is that the employed people of Washington, D. C., mostly federal workers and about half Negroes, have an average annual income of $3,398, which is $855 more than the national average. So the people who live from the Federal payroll are doing considerably better than the average American. It might be added that on the whole they work shorter hours and enjoy more holidays, longer vacations, and more generous fringe benefits in general.

Washington is known as the city of high average incomes, and these inhabitants of the capitol of bureaucracy have enjoyed six general pay increases during the past nine years, the latest of which ups the pay of the top people in Washington by some 25 per cent.

In both the middle and lower grades of Civil Service workers, pay rates are equal to or above those paid for similar work in private industry. The pay of postal employees and Civil Service workers has gone up about 51 per cent during the last eight years.

The latest pay increases for Washington totals about one-half billion dollars a year, raising the total annual payroll of federal employees to something over $17 billion.

In spite of the high income enjoyed by government employees in Washington, the city is the most crime-ridden municipality in our country. It is notoriously unsafe for male or female to go out on the streets at night in our capitol city. If this generous outlay of wealth does not produce a condition of well-being in Washington, what hope is there that the indiscriminate scattering of dollars throughout Appalachia will improve conditions in those depressed areas? A good society cannot be built with dollars. Washington has already won its war on poverty, but the results are highly unsatisfactory. Conquering poverty, crime, illegitimacy, bad housing and slums cannot be accomplished by a lavish outpouring of money. It must be done through moral regeneration. The people can never be gotten out of the slums until the slums are gotten out of the people. Instead of taking the Bible and prayer out of the schools, both ought to be put back in increased measure, and in the homes and churches as well. Public gatherings, holiday celebrations, and public announcements of our officials should emphasize prayer, Bible-reading, the worship of God and the observance of his moral law. There is no other way to conquer the ills which beset humanity. We can spend ourselves to death and go down the drain into the authoritarian state, but we shall never solve the problem of poverty, crime, misery and woe, without the moral regeneration that awaits a return to the worship of God and the acceptance of the moral principles which He has given as a rule for the conduct of man.

Question Box

QUESTION NO. 607:

In the president's acceptance speech at the Democrat Party convention, did he not state that every father should be able to educate his own children, or something very close to that effect?

Answer: President Johnson said: "Every American has the right to be treated as a person. He should be able to find a job, he should be able to educate his children, he should be able to vote in elections, and he should be judged on his merits as a person."

President Johnson was not enunciating the concepts of rights which has been implicit in the understanding of human rights as set forth in the Declaration of Independence. Rather, he was making it appear that somehow the nation ought to provide a job, ought to provide education, ought to provide a chance to vote, and so on. The concept of rights as set forth originally did not hold that a person had a right to a job or a right to education. It held that a man had a right to live, to be free and to seek happiness. There was no guarantee that the man would live, that he would be free or that he would be happy. Rather, the concept was that he had a right to attempt these things at his own cost and without inflicting his will on any other.

President Johnson was restating the general theme when he said that every American had a right to be treated as a person and to be judged on his own merit as a person. But the assumption that everyone has a right to a job or a right to education, creates the impression that no one has a right NOT to hire an applicant for a job, nor to reject an applicant for an education. This is to corrupt the meaning of rights and to make it appear that a person's rights are whatever the government cares to provide. No man has a right to anything that he is unwilling to pay for himself. If it is assumed that rights reside in tangible, material things, then the concept of rights as enunciated in the Soviet Union has been substituted for the concept of rights as set forth by the men who drafted the Declaration of Independence.

In a free market, men who wish jobs will find those they wish when those seeking to hire them are willing to hire them. Likewise, in a free market in education, each man is entitled to purchase the education he wishes for himself and his offspring when someone is willing to sell it to him.

There can be no such thing as a right to any specific material thing without an invasion against the rights of others. President Johnson's statement, in his acceptance speech, contained both the American and the Russian concept of rights. It is quite likely that Mr. Johnson did not detect the distinction.

More Ground Work

By GEORGE BOARDMAN

The United States mint has appealed to the public for help to alleviate what it claims is a coin shortage which will continue to be serious through the Christmas buying season. Treasury Secretary Douglas Dillon claims the shortage is temporary and "we can look forward to the end of the coin shortage next year." Mr. Dillon called a news conference to help the American Bankers Association open a nation-wide campaign designed to ease the shortage this fall.

All of this is more than faintly reminiscent of bureaucratic action which stimulated the silver dollar shortage. Government propagandists may not be particularly bright but they know the quickest way to hasten a famine is to scream shortage. There is no doubt but that the administration would love to get its hands on as much silver coinage as possible in hopes of being able to reduce the silver content. Invariably, these attempts at coin debasing fail because what Mr. Loyd L. Parker of Houston, Texas, calls "contrary citizens or free men" refuse to be hoodwinked. Mr. Parker provides proof of his contention from his stock of Mexican silver coins because he sells three different five - peso coins, each of which contains a different amount of silver.

At the present moment, only the American silver dollar contains silver exactly equal to its denomination at $1.293 per ounce. The ten-cent, twenty-five cent and fifty-cent coins will not contain an equal value in silver until the silver price approaches $1.38 per ounce.

You may very well ask why this discrepancy occurred in the first place in view of the fact that silver coins are valued in a manner which makes exact value and pricing simple. As a matter of fact, this is the reason for having coins of different value in smaller denominations than one dollar. Asking the question, however, will get you exactly no place because one silver dollar contains more silver than two silver half dollars, four quarters or ten dimes. Probably, it was logical that Americans were inclined to ignore such shenanigans until precious metal backing was removed from the currency. Only the most naive and foolish citizens still believe that an ostensible backing of the currency by a 25 per cent value in gold, which Americans are prohibited from owning, amounts to any backing at all in fact.

Personally, I believe the design for the stainless steel quarter has been decided upon and that the "two-bit piece" will be the first modern coin minted without any intrinsic value in this country. Obviously, whatever administration is in power when this happens will plead shortage of silver, shortage of equipment to keep up with the demand for coins, and use a few other basically illogical excuses. Never forget this: there is far more silver in its original state than has ever been mined in this country. Also, of course, there is more gold than has ever been mined, and the supply of these metals would be increased if government at all levels would get off the backs of the people. Just what will happen when the federal government of the United States attempts to place stainless steel quarters into circulation is a subject for speculation. Intelligent people would offer brass buttons or copper pennies in exchange because the actual value would be greater. Eventually, government is certain to create this crisis because of the inherent lack of intelligence in government. It doesn't take intelligence to live a parasitical existence.

Governments have risen and governments have disappeared from view but coins have been a reliable criterion of value regardless. I think you can depend upon it that the American people will not stand still for stainless steel coins regardless of the extent of contemporary unthinkingness.

In the meantime, don't let anyone talk you out of that gold and silver in your teeth.

The Local Scene

Wasted Talent

By RUFUS L. PORTER

As this is being written Monday night, election morning is only hours away. By this time tomorrow we will know who the winners were and who the losers. Many sincere and dedicated men and women will be in both columns. The amount of time, energy and money that has gone into this campaign, from the local to the national lavels, is truly astronomical. It is a shame that it was all wasted on an election campaign.

So much energy, fervor, dedication, sincerity and money could have accomplished many wonders if they had been directed toward constructive ends.

And so much hogwash, mudslinging, lying, baloney, applesauce and tripe have poured out of our TV and radio sets that the stench will remain in the atmosphere probably until the next general election. Whatever happened to the Pure Air Committee that they haven't protested the fouling of our common air at periodic intervals by the asinine mouthings of small-minded and self-serving politicians? The poisons spread in the atmosphere by smog cannot compare for harmful effects to much of the propaganda we are expected to digest during an election year.

When a man enters politics, he leads his character to the altar and offers it to the high priest for sacrifice. And the more honest and upright he has been, the more he will be slandered, for his character assassination will be in the hands of seasoned experts. The Thugs of India were no more adept at destroying men than the poisoned pens of paid political propagandists. As Shakespeare said, in effect, "Who steals my purse steals trash, but who steals my good name, steals that which enriches not him, but makes me poor, indeed."

But politicians must always wash their dirty linen in public — and so much of it is a disgusting "tattle-tale gray."

Now, I have many friends who are politicians and I do not condemn them out of hand for being politicians. Most of them—all of them whom I call friends — are sincere, honest and dedicated men who actually believe they are serving their country and doing their best at the job. And I will go along with the idea that some of them do serve the country better than others, if only because they don't accomplish as much in their chosen profession. And the politician who gives up the game is the one who serves his country best of all.

From the beginnings of civilization men have lived under some sort of political control. They have gone from one form of government to another and seldom bettered themselves, a notable exception being the founding of the republic of the United States of America. And what a glorious country we had up until the Year of Our Lord 1913, the year of the start of our decline and fall. For in that year the 16th Amendment was passed, the Federal Reserve Act was passed and the election of U.S. senators by popular vote was introduced. All these wrong and harmful acts against the country, and many thousands more after them, were perpetrated by politicians who firmly believed they were serving the best interests of the people they were elected to "protect."

But we live in an era of political control, as have all men before us. And to expect that there will be no politicians under the circumstances, is to expect a miracle. Individuals are not to blame for entering the political arena, so long as the arena is there. And many of them have taken a long look at the dirty mess other politicians have made of things and gone in for the sole and expressed purpose of "cleaning up the mess." But they have failed, and the reason they have failed is not because they didn't try, but because no one can stay clean playing such a dirty game.

Politics is a game of poker between the government and the taxpayers wherein the government, always the dealer, deals from a stacked deck and the taxpayers lose their shirts. But as quick as they can go out and earn another shirt, they are back bucking the same old game. They must be compulsive gamblers.

Have Unions Repealed Laws of Supply—Demand?

By OSCAR COOLEY
Associate Professor of Economics
Ohio Northern University

"The laws of demand and supply? Hadn't you heard? Those laws have been repealed."

Thus quips my businessman friend. He knows those economic laws cannot be repealed. They are as unrepealable as the laws of gravitation. But like the latter they can be ignored, and with similarly unpleasant results.

Consider the settlements just made between the automobile manufacturers and the United Auto Workers which call for increasing the price paid for labor by 52 to 57 cents an hour, or nearly $5 a day, over the next three years.

The law of demand states: The quantity of any good or service demanded varies inversely with the price. Which is to say, the higher the price, the less the quantity demanded and purchased.

Thus, this increasing of the wage, or price, for auto labor will result in fewer man-hours being purchased — fewer, that is, than would have been purchased if the price had not been raised.

This law follows from the penchant of human beings to economize, buying more when prices seem low, less when prices seem high. Auto manufacturers are human and react to this law just as the rest of us do.

Now if auto workers were scarce, a wage rise might be justified, for it would shrink the quantity demanded to fit the small quantity supplied, but such is not the case. Only two years ago, Detroit had so many unemployed auto workers it was declared a "depressed area" and received special gifts from the federal Santa Claus. Even now you may be sure there are auto workers who do not have any too much employment. But, following this wage rise, they will have even less (due to the action of the union which is supposed to look out for their interests).

Eugene V. Debs, the onetime Socialist union leader, when asked what labor wanted, said: "It wants more, and more, and more, and it wants it now!" Unions almost invariably demand higher wage rates, that is, higher prices for their members' services. But if they force wage rates up faster than productivity per worker rises, some workers pay for it by the law of demand inexorably cutting into numbers employed.

This reduction in employment is not suffered by all the workers equally. Some work just as many hours as before, at the higher rate per hour, while others are laid off, working not at all. Still others who would have been hired in at the old, lower wage rate are not called. They remain on the unemployed rolls.

Those who are laid off and those who are not called in bitterly condemn the employer. They cannot understand why, amid so much prosperity and rising wage rates, they have no work at all. The law of demand is why. It has not been repealed. It often works invisibly but it works.

Let us look at the law of supply: The quantity of any good or service supplied varies directly with the price. This means that the higher the prices the more eager producers are to supply the good and therefore the more they supply.

Applying this law to the auto labor wage increase, it follows that at the higher wage more workers will want to work, and each will want to put in more hours. This, too, is a human reaction. When the price of corn is high, farmers plant a lot of corn. When houses are selling at good prices, contractors build a lot of houses. Rising prices signal rising demand, and producers hustle to fill it.

But does the rising auto wage mean that demand for auto workers is rising? No. If it did, the wages would have risen without any union pressure or threat of strike. The wage rate has been forced up, but this forced rise will have the same effect as though it had come about in response to the natural force of increased demand, that is, it will increase the number of man-hours that auto workers will put on the market.

But that increase of man-hours will be offered at the very time that the quantity demanded is shrinking, due to the law of demand. Thus an increase in quantity of man-hours supplied, occurring simultaneously with a decrease in quantity demanded, will act doubly to increase the quantity unsold — that is, the unemployed!

The union leaders weep crocodile tears over the plight of the unemployed when, in fact, they, the ones who continually force uneconomic wage rises, are the authors of that plight.

Labor unions cause unemployment. In fact, they are the primary cause of unemployment. Congress by raising the minimum wage also causes unemployment, but fewer workers are affected by the $1.25 an hour wage floor than by the monumental wage increases forced on the big mass industries by unions.

Powerful as are the unions, they have not and cannot repeal the laws of demand and supply.

each other, so I knew that (God being always consistent) there was a message there that I wasn't getting. This may be the answer: If your husband doesn't fix the leaky faucets, or water the lawn, or repair the electrical appliances, you finally (in despair) substitute for him, and do it yourself. You have gained a little in self-sufficiency, practical knowledge, and lost a little of your need for him. If you complement and complete each other, where you have gained, he has lost; he has given up a little of his strength to you. . .by failing to BE A MAN! Since I believe that God made women with the desire to be a woman, I therefore believe that masculine women are the result and (and fulfillment) of effeminate men. If you want proof, just look around you, and listen to the current news.

If the foregoing is true of men as individuals, how much more is it true of nations, which is a mass name for multiplied individuals? Is this nation "bold — daring. . .speaks its mind. . . preferring fighting to running . . . taking chances" in its faith in its ability to handle the situation. . .? Is it a nation of individuals that love to be self-supporting? Or, is it a nation that is retiring . . . weak . . preferring security rather than strength; does she seldom say what she is thinking. . .preferring diplomacy. . .peace at any cost? Does she prefer being supported. . .preferably by the government? YOU know, and I know which best describes this nation today! What I want to ask is, "WHO EMASCULATED THIS NATION!" Was it by default?

Make no mistake! If God provides a "master" to dominate the weak, we will be dominated by a stronger nation, by one that has more confidence in their God than we have in ours! The only people who become fearful when a man talks like a man, are those who have no faith in God to protect us. Let those who cringe at Barry Goldwater stand and be counted.

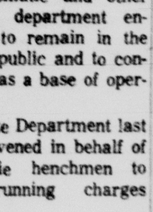
Trouble Brewing In Haiti



PAUL SCOTT

WASHINGTON —For a tortuous foreign policy, none is more perplexing than the double standard now being pursued by the Johnson administration in the dictator-plagued Caribbean.

On one hand, stern measures are being forcefully invoked to prevent Cuban refugees from warring against Fidel Castro's Communist dicatorship. The full weight of the U. S. government is being exerted to this end — the State Department, the Navy, Air Force, Coast Guard and other agencies.

At the same time, the Central Intelligence Agency is covertly supplying money and arms to favored Haitian exiles seeking to get rid their long-suffering land of its latest blood-drenched dictator, "Papa Doc" Duvalier, self-proclaimed "life-time president."

Leader of this preferred group is Louis Dejoie, one-time Haitian senator.

Moving freely between the U. S. and the Dominican Republican, his main base of operations, Dejoie is in close touch with CIA authorities — who in turn are acting under the direction of important State Department officials.

Thus, the department not only is fully cognizant of this undercover activity, but has a direct hand in it.

Other Haitian exiles, also fighting "Papa Doc," are wary of Dejoie and leading elements supporting him. They charge his ranks prominently include Communists and other left-wingers whose real aim is to replace Duvalier with a Castro-type Red regime.

Leader of this critical faction is Dr. Roger Rigaud, also based in the Dominican Republic.

A one-time Haitian businessman and strongly pro-U. S., Rigaud is distrustful of the State Department and CIA and is getting no help from them. Some aid is coming from Caribbean countries and individual Americans.

SAVED BY STATE DEPARTMENT

Influential Dominican authorities are making little secret that they favor Dr. Rigaud, and would like to get rid of Dejoie and his motley assortment of strongly suspected left-wing followers.

Dominican President Donald Reid Cabral is credited as feeling very much that way.

But the Dominican's hands are tied because of State Department and CIA support of Dejoie. The Dominican regime is heavily dependent on the U. S., and in no position to oppose the Johnson administration.

A graphic illustration of this was the recommendation of the Dominican National Investigation (Justice) Department that Dejoie and his group be ousted. The ruling civilian triumvirate, headed by Cabral, were very eager to enforce this proposal.

But the crackdown was blocked by the State Department. Through diplomatic and other channels, the department enabled Dejoie to remain in the Dominican Republic and to continue using it as a base of operations.

Also the State Department last summer intervened in behalf of several Dejoie henchmen to quash gun running charges against them.

A special commission of the Organization of American States is in Santo Domingo arbitrating a long-pending boundary dispute between the Dominican Republic and Haiti. Headed by Manuel Trucco, Chile, the commission favors all Haitian exiles be asked to leave the Dominican Republic as a move to improve relations with Haiti.

The State Department is covertly opposing this peace proposal.

The Department is against Dejoie's group being ousted from its Dominican base, and to prevent that is blocking the Trucco commission's recommendation.

CARIBBEAN FLASHES

A top Dominican official, with extensive sugar interests, turned over $100,000 in cash to an attorney to be deposited in a numbered account in a Swiss bank. This Dominican official also imported several hundred duty-free U. S. automobiles, and made a big killing in this deal.

Park Officials Will Attend Fall Conference

Local park and recreation officials will attend the annual fall conference of the Colorado Recreation Society.

This will be Thursday and Friday in the Continental-Denver Motel.

Two bills which could effect the future of parks and recreation in Colorado will be discussed: the Wilderness Bill and the Land and Water Conservation Act.

Marjorie Miller, recreation director of the Air Defense Command in Colorado Springs, will preside over the conference as president of the Society.

Also attending from the Pikes Peak region will be: Paul Morris, superintendent of the Security Park and Recreation District; Donald Kupfer, Colorado Springs Park and Recreation Department, program director of the meeting; three other officials from the city park and recreation department, Stuart Richter, director, Moe Rollert, superintendent of recreation and Thomas Brennan, assistant superintendent of recreation; Lt. Col. Vilas Lacey, Army Air Defense Command Headquarters; and representatives from the Air Force Academy and Ft. Carson's special services section.

Richter and Rollert are ex-presidents of the state society. With Brennan, they are on the society's administrative council.

Robert L. Stearns, a member of the National Parks Advisory Committee, will open the first general session of the society at 10:30 a.m. Thursday with a talk on "Futures in Recreation." Other discussions will be by Harry Woodward, director of the Colorado Game, Fish and Parks Commission, and Dr. James Galvin, chairman of the Citizens Committee of the Denver "War on Poverty." Judge Harold Lutz will speak at a Friday luncheon.

Jules Mondschein of the University of Denver School of Social Work will speak on the dynamics of planning for recreation programs, while conducting a workshop on this.

Another workshop will deal with methods of land acquisition.

Cambodia Peace Conference Urged

WASHINGTON (AP) — Soviet Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin discussed with Secretary of State Dean Rusk Wednesday the possibility of an international conference on Cambodia and its border problems.

Department press officer Robert J. McCloskey noted that Cambodia's Prince Norodom Sihanouk had proposed a conference months ago. The proposition has been discussed by interested governments from time to time since, the press officer said.

De Gaulle Sends Greetings to Johnson

PARIS (AP) — President Charles de Gaulle sent customary congratulations today to President Johnson on his election victory.

The message said:

"I sent to you, Mr. President, my most sincere congratulations on your brilliant election.

"I have every confidence that under your presidency the American people, friend and ally of the French people, will continue to live and progress in peace and prosperity."

Humphrey May Go to Paris For New Talks

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

WASHINGTON (AP) — One of President Johnson's first post-election moves in foreign policy may be to send a high-level representative — perhaps Hubert H. Humphrey — to Europe to talk with French President Charles de Gaulle and other allied leaders about the split in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

In administration quarters there is persistent speculation that Johnson may ask Vice President-elect Humphrey to undertake the assignment, perhaps in company with Undersecretary of State George W. Ball, the State Department's top expert on allied problems.

There is also talk that Johnson may ask Ball alone to carry out such a mission.

Speculation that Johnson will send an emissary to Europe increases as it becomes more and more unlikely that the President himself will go there this year. During the campaign he spread the word that he might find some occasion to address a NATO meeting in November or December. He was represented as being deeply concerned about splintering allied unity in Europe.

Actually the post-election period will bring talks in Washington of considerable importance to the alliance. Belgian Foreign Minister Paul-Henri Spaak is due here next week for consultations with Secretary of State Dean Rusk. Spaak, a former secretary-general of NATO, has been one of the European leaders most actively interested in trying to find solutions for NATO's divisive problems and for the severe economic disagreement between France and West Germany within the European Common Market.

In about a month British Prime Minister Harold Wilson plans to come here for talks with Johnson. He is anxious to find some formula for shifting Britain's nuclear weapons force to NATO and he would like to modify the U.S. plan for a NATO nuclear navy toward which the British have been cool for several years.

The key personality in the discussion which could tear NATO apart is De Gaulle.

He is threatening to drop out of the Common Market unless West Germany comes to terms quickly on a European grain price plan. He has also implied that so far as France is concerned U.S. success in carrying through the plan for a NATO nuclear navy would split NATO wide open — the implication being that France would virtually withdraw from the alliance.

The Johnson administration is at the point of beginning a review of foreign policy on a high-level scale, with urgent attention being given to the alliance crisis. It is in this connection that Johnson may wish to sound out De Gaulle's personal views.

Undersecretary Ball had a long talk with the French leader at a time of earlier disagreement and U.S. officials said it was extremely useful.

Top Politicians Quoted After U. S. Elections

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here is what leading political figures were saying immediately after President Johnson's landslide victory over Barry Goldwater:

Johnson: "I hope all Americans will lay aside partisan passions and petty differences to unite in building a better and growing country and securing an honorable peace in freedom for all mankind."

Goldwater: "I have no bitterness, no rancor at all."

Republican National Chairman Dean Burch: "There are 730 days left until the 1966 elections and we intend to use them to good advantage for our party and our country."

Democratic National Chairman John M. Bailey: "We Democrats consider this mandate not merely a rejection of extreme elements in America, but also a mandate for unity in our country."

Sen.-elect Robert F. Kennedy: "We have a mandate to continue what we started four years ago."

Henry Cabot Lodge: "We Republicans must rebuild our party."

No Litterbugs Are They on Alaskan Trek

By BETSY WOODMAN

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (UPI) —The husband who complains about having to carry the garbage out to the back fence should consider the case of a California father and son who carried the garbage 70 miles.

Floyd W. Kauer, 58, and his son, Floyd, Jr., 16, made that long garbage trek during an 8,000-mile tour of Alaska and Canada on a pair of motor bikes.

They also made friends of the amazed Alaskans when they told of carrying their garbage that far along the Alaska roads before finding a roadside receptacle.

"There just aren't enough trash cans along the way" Kauer said, adding that this was the only complaint the two had concerning their summer-long trip.

The Kauers left their San Mateo, Calif., home June 17 to "see what the quake was like."

Carrying only the barest essentials, they arrived in Dawson City, Yukon, July 12 and bought a 13-foot skiff from an Indian for the trip down the Yukon river.

With a pair of empty oil drums lashed to the skiff for balance and their bikes secured aboard, the Kauers spent four days and three nights on the river.

"I'm well acquainted with rivers," Kauer said simply, adding that he had guided many a hunting party in the Rockies.

Thier river trip ended at Circle where they traded the skiff for two breakfasts—double orders of hotcakes and coffee. They also made numerous friends in Circle among the Indian children by giving them rides on the motor bikes.

From Circle they hit the road again, this time to Fairbanks, where they arrived just in time for the city's "Golden Days" festival.

"I was dressed most authentically for the event," said Kauer, who sported a prospect type beard and wore high-laced boots, jeans and lumber jacket.

When they reached Homer, special arrangements were made for them to ride Alaska's new ferry, Tustumena, on its inaugural trip to Anchorage.

Their homeward route was along the Alaska Marine Highway to Prince Rupert, B.C.

"The hardest thing is to keep clean in the dust," said Kauer, who gave his "rules of the road:"

"Goggles on, mouth shut, hand on throttle and eyes on road."

"We stop to do our looking," he said.

The looking has included signs of grizzly bear, black bear, wolverine, moose, sand hill cranes, Canadian geese, and a nest of lynx kittens they found along the river. Also scenery "more beautiful than I ever dreamed," in the opinion of young Floyd.

To insure their continued interest in Alaska—and possibly to provide an excuse for returning—the two bought a piece of land near Anchor Point.

MY ANSWER by Billy Graham

© 1964 by Chicago Tribune N.Y. News Syndicate, Inc.

QUESTION: My daughter and I read the Bible together but we often get a different meaning out of the same verses. Shouldn't there be just one clear meaning to each verse? —MRS. H.L.

ANSWER: I do not believe that it is because the same verse actually has double meaning, but rather because we seldom get the full meaning from any given text. When two people get just part of the meaning of a verse, they would naturally seem to be different, but in reality they compliment each other. The very fact that this is experienced by so many should caution us to prayerfully observe all that God's Word has to say to us and not be content with morsels of truth. The best way to be reasonably sure of the meaning of any Scripture is to compare it with other Scriptures. Nothing can throw so much light on the Scriptures as the Scriptures themselves. Once we understand fully the teaching of the Bible, we find it to be in complete agreement and consistency.

The Holy Spirit inspired men long ago to write this book—He must guide in its interpretation.

QUESTION: How many times can we be forgiven? I get angry, have evil thoughts, and say things I shouldn't. Sometimes I doubt that I am even a Christian; I seem to spend most of my time trying to get back on the right path. —G.L.

ANSWER: I once knew a man who was overconcerned about his health. He was alive, but he carried a thermometer with him, and took his temperature every day. Then, he would take his watch out and count his pulse and respiration. He was never really sick, though he expected to be any moment.

You say you have accepted Christ. That is the greatest thing that can happen to a person — to inherit eternal life through Him. None of us have absolute perfection. The best of us are unworthy of His grace. But we are not to be overconcerned about our feelings, and spend valuable time taking our spiritual temperature. We are servants of the most high God. We are ambassadors for Christ. We have a world in crises that needs our help. Don't get the paralysis of analysis and hinder yourself from letting your light shine for Him.

Maritime Unions Announce Strikes

ROME (AP) — Communist and non-Communist Italian maritime unions have ordered their members to strike from 4 to 12 hours in ports around the world between today and Monday.

The unions said entire crews would strike on passenger and cargo vessels operated by the big state-controlled shipping firms. Among the passenger ships are the Leonardo da Vinci and the Cristoforo Colombo, on the Italian Line's North American run.

Looking At Hollywood

By HEDDA HOPPER

© 1964: By the Chicago Tribune

HOLLYWOOD — Talked to Trevor Howard, here finishing "Von Ryan's Express" with Frank Sinatra, and asked him how it's going. "Very well," said he. "Sinatra, fun to work with, and this one's not as long as 'Muntiny'." Trevor loves it here, would like to spend the winter altho he's been offered many things in England; one's a film about Gladstone, another about Napoleon. He's also wanted for "The Spy Who Came in Out of the Cold." He says he's picked up his Hollywood cricket games again—used to play with Aubrey Smith, and that group is still active. He floored me when he said there are twenty cricket teams around this town. He got the shock of his life when he and his wife went into a cafe lit up like a circus outside and very dark inside. "I was startled to see waitresses serving drinks with benefit of little clothing!"

ITALIAN RAFFAELLA CARRA, the only woman in "Von Ryan's Express," resembles both Audrey Hepburn and Sophi Loren. Mark Robson saw her on a TV variety show when in Rome and signed her; then 20th gave her a longterm deal. She's played leads with Marcel Mastroianni and other top Italian stars, speaks excellent English. . . . John Van Dreelen flies to Holland on Nov. 14 to help celebrate the 20th anniversary of their Benelux radio-TV network. He'll play the lead in a special production of "Daddy Long Legs" in Dutch: Queen Juliana will introduce him.

THE INDIAN SIGN is sure on Joe Hamilton's "The Entertainers." Carol Burnett was first casualty with an injured back. Imogene Coca is doing her stint from a swivel chair — broke an ankle while taping the segment. Now Gwen Verdon, doing the Nov. 6 show, broke a bone in her left foot. They should all get purple hearts. . . Mary Benny's friends are concerned. She's mourning the death of her mother which happened some days ago. Her father died a year ago. And she'll never get over the loss of Gracie Allen. George Burns is at the Benny home daily; they said they'd love to have him move in. Mary misses those long calls she had every morning with Gracie. When she'd hang up the phone she'd call her mother and pass on all the news to her.

WHEN WHITTAKER CHAMBERS was hospitalized and allowed no visitors, the sole exception was a Passionist Monk, Father Alan, the hospital chaplain. Esther Chambers tells about this in her book "Cold Friday." "One night Whittaker decided to cut thru the irrelevancies of their chat and try to discover what kind of man this monk might be. He asked: Father, what am I to answer those people who keep writing me that I was wrong to say in "Witness" that I had left the winning side for the losing side? Father Alan studied his hands, then glanced at me directly to say: "And who says the west deserved to be saved?" ....Robert Redford, making his first picture for Paramount, "Situation Hopeless but Not Serious," on German location, flies to London to see Tony Richardson about playing the role of Iago in the forthcoming production of "Othello" there. Redford was a big hit on Broadway in "Barefoot in the Park," with Elizabeth Ashley.

ARTHUR TREACHER, here to do a couple of segments for "Beverly Hillbillies," hasn't driven a car in 30 years. He either uses a chauffeur or is taken by friends, but in Paul Henning's script he has to drive the 1921 Clampett truck. They brought him from the east a few days early to take a refresher couse at the wheel, but not without home trepidation. Jesse Pearson signed for an uproarious part on the Nov. 18 show, plays a hillbilly who's made millions singing to kids.... Perry Como's show was a honey he's never been in better voice. Anne Bancroft has really learned to sing and dance.

By CHARLES C. CAIN
AP Business News Writer

DETROIT (AP) — Now that all the 1965 car models are on display, it seems apparent that this is the year of the stylist.

Most of the 343 new offerings of the U.S. auto industry have important engineering changes too, but it is the eye-catching appearance of the new cars which is credited with drawing customers into dealer showrooms.

A large portion of the styling changes center on the standard-sized cars which generally make up about 60 per cent of registrations. There are new bodies for Chrysler, Dodge and Plymouth, for Ford and Mercury and each of the General Motors divisions.

Among the smaller cars, Corvair has been restyled for the first time and offers hardtops instead of center post sedans. Rambler Ambassadors have been completely redesigned and have a four-inch increase in wheelbase this year, moving into what is generally known as the intermediates.

Dodge Cornet is another new intermediate and Plymouth Belevedere also is being sold as an intermediate.

Many models are longer for 1965. The average wheelbase is 121 inches and the average length is 211 inches. Based on comparative 1964 models, this is 0.56 inches more wheelbase than last year and 1.9 inches more length.

Curved side windows are found in many of the new cars. GM has joined Ford and Mercury in fitting regular sized convertibles with tempered glass rear windows.

Vertically positioned headlights are a styling feature on many of the new cars and there has been a considerable increase in colors and car interiors.

New car advertising is placing heavy emphasis on cars' looks this year. General Motors, for example, announced its '65 Chevrolets under the banner "Beautiful Shape for 1965." Pontiac headlined: "How Does the Success Car Outdo Itself for '65? Beautifully, Just Beautifully."

American Motors termed its new offerings "the sensible spectaculars," accenting more sweeping and longer lines and power plants to fit the needs of all buyers.

A survey of the industry showed that all manufacturers were telling of improvements in their power trains as a key move in the 1965 engineering picture.

Automatic transmissions have been refined; Oldsmobile and Pontiac have new units and Ford Motor Co. is using three-speed Cruise-o-Matic with sixes as well as eights.

A survey of horsepower showed some fairly general boosts. Oldsmobile has a new V-8; Chrysler Newport and Dodge Polara Custom 880 have larger engines and all Ford sixes are bigger and more powerful.

Rambler Ambassador has its first six cylinder engine and most Rambler Classics have the 232 cubic inch six that was optional on '64s.

Boundaries between the three sizes of cars — compacts, intermediate and standard — are crossed frequently in the matter of price, luxury, performance and handling. Reports indicate that quite a few compact car buyers shop around for a basic car at the lowest price and then add on several hundred dollars worth of extra options.

Labor troubles plagued the industry in the first weeks of its 1965 run, but most factory representatives feel the worst is behind them and that soon they can concentrate on selling the diversified, highly styled cars

Looks Good Enough For Them to Eat

DALLAS, Tex. (AP)—Georgiana and Lodge Robertson often eat their day's work. That's because their business is tasty and beautiful food. As owners of a food merchandising service, they develop recipe campaigns for major food processors, canners and retailers.

After Mrs. Robertson develops a suitable set of recipes for a client, she prepares each dish for the color camera.

"We never use any fakery such as spraying the food with shellac, using shaving cream for real whipped cream, mashed potatoes for ice cream or any other tricks," explains Robertson.

On a day when the photographer comes to make a series of photographs, the cooking begins about 6 a.m. and may continue until midnight. After completion of the picture taking the photographers consume the food they have photographed.

TRINI SIGNS

MERCER DITTY

FEMALE FINANCIERS

WASHINGTON, D.C. (AP) — Farm women are playing a greater role, not only in farm operations, but in decision-making, according to the Farm Deputy Governor, F. Vernon Wright. He suggests women be consulted about complete family financing, since "it is entirely true that a deep freeze can be as important economically as a new tractor."

Speedier Publication Proposed for Journal

NEW YORK (UPI) — More speed in the printing of medical journals would help avoid such tragedies as the deaths and crippling of hundreds of infants by the drug Thalidomide, according to a leading printer of scientific, medical and industrial journals.

Dissemination of vital information is delayed by the slow, involved process of getting out the tradition-bound scientific abstract journals, said John Ferguson II, chairman of the board of the Monumental Printing Co. of Baltimore.

In another instance, Ferguson said, information about a new and effective treatment for leprosy lesions was not printed for nearly a year.

He said he had persuaded editors of several scientific journals ti cut their established procedures so the publications could be printed in weeks, instead of months and years.

BACK TO BOOKS

NORWALK, Conn. (AP)—Proving that there is no age limit on learning, 20 women ranging in age from 33 to 76 have enrolled in a lecture series course made available by the Radcliffe Club of Lower Fairfield County.

Six two - hour seminars are included, with three written papers required from each person in the class. One student manages to take care of her seven children in addition to her studies.

How to Keep Well

DELAYED GROWTH

A short stature is accepted by most children until adolescence is reached. Some then begin to wonder if they are normal, because there often is an associated sexual infantilism.

Johnny was a 13-year - old whose growth was delayed by at least two years. His length at birth was 19 inches, and his parents were of normal size. He always had been smaller than average and in the past year had grown only one inch. The boy had no hair in the armpits or elsewhere on the body and was becoming embarrassed by his shortness and lack of sexual development.

Tests were done to determine whether low metabolism or a poorly function pituitary gland was responsible. X - rays were taken of the long bones, which showed he was two years behind in growth. The absence of 12-year molars was additional evidence of a constitutionally delayed growth.

This boy will grow in time—possibly at age 16 or 17. He was told this and given a choice between letting well enough alone or taking glandular therapy to accelerate the process. Endocrine products stimulate the bones to mature fully but if this occurs before full growth is reached, an inch of ultimate stature mey be sacrificed.

After Johnny took testoste one and thyroid for eight months, he began to grow and mature and now is as tall as his father.

Children whose pituitary gland is not working normally can be helped, thanks to the development of an effective human growth hermone. A gain of several inches in a year may occur. But the hormones from 200 to 250 pituitaries are needed to treat a youngster for 12 months, and the supply of these glands is limited. This hurdle must be eliminated before the remedy becomes practical.

Dr. Van Dellen will answer questions on medical topics if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request.

PRESSURE UPS AND DOWNS

I. S. writes: I went to see a doctor and he took my blood pressure. It was 175. I rested five minutes and it was 145. Which is the true reading?

REPLY

Both are true readings. The blood pressure fluctuates normally and tends to go up during excitement and exercise and down when resting. We might say that your working blood pressure is 175 and resting, 145. The fact that yours went down is encouraging.

ADRENAL SURVEY

M. L. writes: How is adrenal gland insufficiency determined?

REPLY

Symptoms are considered first. They include fatigue, weight loss, pigmentation of the skin, loss of appetite, nausea, irritability, emotional instability, and low blood pressure. The blood is tested for anemia, eosinophilia, low sodium and chloride, and high potassium. The level of steroids in the urine is tested after the administration of ACTH.

CHRISTMAS MALADY

F. F. writes: Can you tell me more about Christmas virus?

REPLY

Christmas disease is an inherited blood deficiency of a certhere is a deficiency of a certain component in the blood. I don't know anything about a medical Christmas virus but the term might refer to the frantic urge to shop that many women "catch" during the holiday season.

SHOOTING PAINS

A. N. writes: What causes momentary pains in arms, legs, and thighs in a woman of 57? They are surface pains, not in the joints.

REPLY

The cause of pain of this type is difficult to determine. It may stem from nervousness or from irritation of sensory nerve fibers in the upper spine or in the brain.

COINCIDENCE

Deloris Schenck, Hatfield, a., and Sandra Schenck, Glen Ridge N.J., who are not related, entered the same training class at American Airlines' Stewardess College here.

The two are the same age and exactly the same height of 5 feet, 6¼ inches. Both are horseback riding enthusiasts, and their handwriting is almost identical. Of nearly 150 girls from over the country taking the course, the Schencks were the only two who write with a slant to the left. Both prefer upper and lower case printing to regular handwriting.

FOR MERRY MEN AND PILGRIMS

It's because Robin's longbow and the blunderbuss of the Pilgrims are among the weapons perscribed for hunters' use in the area.

The state Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources and the U. S. Forest Service set aside an 8,000 - acre tract in the forest as a primitive weapons area.

The weapons are defined as longbows, crossbows, muzzle-loading rifles and muzzle-loading shotguns.

WRITING URGE

CAPITOL STUFF

By TED LEWIS

Some profound knowledge has seeped into the public consciousness from this Presidential campaign even if the general cynical attitude is today, as we surmise: "Thank God it's over."

But for the kind of campaign it has been, we wouldn't know for example:

1. That the Presidency is not the most confusing job in the world nor requires dawn to midnight White House attention. Otherwise LBJ would have carried on a front porch campaign, not tried to grab every hand through the nation.

2. That the Vice Presidency isn't actually a post which is apt to drive an energetic man "crazy" as Johnson once considered it. Otherwise the President would have had a mean motive in choosing Hubert Humphrey to run with him.

3. That there are more good people around who want to be loved than bad people who want to hate. At least that must be the estimate based on the indicated success of LBJ's "love the people" appeal, or anti-hate campaign.

These are the obvious clarifications that have come from this campaign.

But there have been many others that should not be lost sight of. If it hadn't been for the campaign millions of people would have been ignorant of Hubert Humphrey's middle name, Horatio. Or that Goldwater's name had the chemical derivative AuH2O.

Even a welcome addition to geographical knowledge has been one of the attributes of the campaign. Phoenix is now known to be a city in Arizona, not an ancient Egyptian religious figure. Lockport, N.Y., will be more readily located by school children and others because it is the home of William E. Miller.

AND LEARNING
MORE ABOUT TEXAS

It has also become common knowledge that Lockport has a felt factory. This bit of industrial information would have been lost to posterity if the Democrats had not brought out Miller's financial interest in the felt works.

It would also have been a national loss if the voters had not in this campaign been able to learn a lot more about Texas. There had been an assumption that Austin was just the quite capital of the Lone Star State. Now we know that it has only one television station, and that it is owned by the President and Lady Bird. Also that it is a lucrative monopoly, the keystone to LBJ's ability to become a millionaire.

Or think of the profound knowledge gained concerning the Pedernales River in Texas. Only the local yokels would have known about this two-bit creek that flows by the LBJ ranch had not Johnson helped put it on the world map right after the Atlantic City Democratic Convention.

It was under the live oaks by the Pedernales that he wanted to commune with nature and his running mate Humphrey in their first get-together on the shape of the campaign.

APPRECIATING MEANING OF OLD VIRTUES

Yet there are spoilsports who keep insisting that this has been a "know - nothing" campaign. They should take a much closer look at their increased store of knowledge.

Think of how much more everybody knows on this Election Day about beagles, that this is a breed of dog with big and sensitive ears.

There is even a new appreciation of the meaning of old virtues, like prudence, morality, honesty — even love. But for the high tone of this campaign those important matters would have been lost sight of in a discussion of domestic and foreign issues.

What Presidential campaign of the past ever had such powerful and constructive slogans as "LBJ all the way," or "AuH2O in '64" or "In your heart you know he's right."

Consider also the way the nation's political lexicon has been embellished with simple words losing their old meaning as they are given new political twists.

The initials GOP used to stand for Grand Old Party. Now there are two GOPs, the Goldwater party and the anti-Goldwater party.

Then there is Johnson's "one big tent" party, which used to be the Democratic Party. In this campaign the Johnson-Humphrey ticket has sublimated crass partisanship in behalf of a national unity seeding of the old Democratic Party with old-line Republicans like Henry Ford.

Russians May Be Serious About U. N. Step

By MAX HARRELSON

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — One of the big question marks in the U.N. financial crisis is whether the Russians really mean to quit the world organization or just their voting rights are suspended.

Those who have observed Soviet actions at the United Nations over the past 18 years are not only that the Russians can — and do — change their minds.

They may walk out of a U.N. body and return without so much as a word to explain their reversal.

Over the years they have made many threats they have never carried out, and they have suddenly abandoned policies which they previously held to be absolutely unchangeable.

That is why some U.N. diplomats still hope that a showdown on finances will be averted by a last-minute settlement before the General Assembly convenes Dec. 1. They feel that perhaps the prospect of a Soviet shift has been increased by the change in Soviet leadership.

But in the event the assembly does take away Soviet voting rights, for lack of payments on peacekeeping operations, past performances indicate the Russians would respond with some sort of protest gesture. The history of the United Nations is punctuated with Soviet walkouts, boycotts and snubs of various duration to show the Kremlin's displeasure. In the Security Council, the Russians have used the veto on some occasions for the same reason.

There has rarely been a time when some form of Soviet boycott of the U.N. was not in effect.

One of the most dramatic came when Andrei A. Gromyko walked out of the Security Council March 27, 1946. The issue then was withdrawal of Soviet troops from Iran. Gromyko sought to delay debate 10 days. Although Gromyko walked back in a few days after he walked out, his action created a sensation because the U.N. was then so new. Many asked whether this meant the end of the organization.

In 1950 the Russians launched what came near to being a general boycott of the United Nations. Starting early in the year they stalked out of one U.N. organ after another, asserting that they would never come back until Red China won representation.

The Soviet boycott even included the 11-nation Security Council. It boomeranged, however, when the council voted U.N. intervention in the Korean war — a decision which the Soviet Union could have blocked with its veto if it had been present.

This broke the back of the boycott. The Russians returned to all U.N. bodies although Red China still was unrepresented. Incidentally, they insisted for years that they would never agree to any U.N. charter revision until the Peking regime was seated but earlier this year they indicated they would back amendments to enlarge the Security Council and the Economic and Social Council.

Several other Soviet boycotts grew out of the Korean War. These included refusal to acknowledge Trygve Lie as secretary-general of the United Nations and refusal to serve on the U.N. Committee for the Unification and Rehabilitation of Korea. Even now the Soviet Union refuses to pay its budgetary assessments for this and for the U.N. Memorial Cemetery in Korea. It also refuses to pay some other assessment, including those for the Palestine Truce Supervision Organization.

The Russians never attended the meetings of the "little assembly," an emergency committee of all U.N. members set up to get around the Soviet veto. It also has boycotted U.N.'s Collective Measures Committee ever since its organization in 1950.

Another notable Soviet boycott was refusal to deal with Dag Hammarskjold in his final months as U.N. secretary-general. The feud with Hammarskjold resulted in Nikita Khrushchev's famous "troika" plan for a three-man executive committee to replace the office of secretary-general. At one point the Russians implied that failure to adopt this plan would lead to a U.N. collapse. The troika plan was all but forgotten after U Thant was chosen secretary-general.

TWO-CAR DRIVER

ARLINGTON, Va. (AP) — "I thought I had heard everything but this is a brand new one for me," admitted Judge Berton V. Cramer in Arlington Traffic Court.

Miss Gayle Andrews, 24, was faced with the problem of moving two cars several blocks one morning. She solved it by starting the rear car's motor, putting it in gear and hopping in the front one, thus permitting the rear vehicle to push the one that was steering. The cars were not attached.

The young woman said she felt her method of travel was perfectly safe because she was moving very slowly and there was little traffic on the street at 3:30 in the morning. She indicated that she was moving so slowly that she could jump out of the lead car and hop into the pushing auto to realign it if necessary. Twice, she reported, she stopped and adjusted the position, car.

Miss Andrews disagreed with the reckless driving charge against her, but the judge fined her $25 saving, "If that isn't reckless driving, I don't know what is."

"He heard we were friends of Bob, and any friends of Bob are friends of his."

Western States Show Building Contract Rise

Contracts for future construction in the 11 states west of the Rocky Mountains in September totaled $795,017,000, up one per cent compared to September 1963, F. W. Dodge Company — a division of McGraw-Hill, Inc. — announced today.

According to the Dodge report, gains in contracts for nonresidential building and nonbuilding construction were almost offset by a decrease in contracts for residential building.

September contracts for nonresidential building amounted to $207,219,000, up 7 per cent compared to the year ago month. Gains were registered in contracts for manufacturing, hospital, social and recreational buildings.

However, contracts for commercial, educational and science, public, and religious buildings were off.

Contracts for residential building in September in the 11 Western States totaled $375,902,000, down 16 per cent compared to the like 1963 month. All major classifications in this category were off.

Nonbuilding construction contracts in September amounted to $211,896,000, up 44 per cent compared to September 1963. Contracts for streets and highways were primarily responsible for the gain.

K-Mart Readied For Opening In November

When the huge new K-mart, a family discount department store, opens its doors at the corner of Airport Road and Circle Drive Shopping Center Nov. 19, shoppers will enter an area the size of two football fields.

The store is one of 32 new K-marts being opened this year by the Kresge Company.

Officials of the company have announced that a K-mart is a solid, one-story structure of modern, functional design.

The store is built of or will make use of the following in any one year:

— Enough glass in the store front alone to make a fence ten feet high and 250 feet long.

— Enough fluorescent tubes to make a four foot high picket fence completely around a 175 foot by 90 foot lot or, laid end to end, to make one fluorescent tube more than two miles long.

— Enough flooring tiles to floor ten foot by ten foot kitchens for almost 1,500 homes.

— Enough concrete to make a sidewalk four feet wide three inches deep and 125 miles long.

— Use enough air-conditioning in any one year to keep 75 good sized homes at 60 degrees all year long.

— Use enough gas to heat 800 homes for a year.

When all of these and a number of other ingredients are put together by master builders a comfortable shopping area exists, containing enough merchandise to clothe and furbish the people and homes of a small city.

COPTER CONTRACT

HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI) — United Aircraft Corp. announced it has obtained a $5.17 million Air Force contract for CH3C helicopters and a $4.26 million Air Force award for developing of weather forecasting equipment.

R. R. 'ANIMAL'

NEW YORK (UPI) — The nation's newest locomotive, a 300-horsepower behemoth, has "the best characteristics of a racehorse and a mule," its builder says.

The new unit, 76 feet long and 15 feet high, is the first mainline diesel-hydraulic to be built in this country. It has a racehorse capacity for high speeds over level terrain and a mule's doggedness in hauling trains up steep grades at sustained low speeds, according to Alco Products, Inc.

A diesel-hydraulic transmits power from engine to wheels through a hydraulic system, similar to an automobile's automatic transmission. The conventional diesel-electric locomotive transmits power from the engine to a generator, thence to individual axle-mounted electric motors, to the wheels.

Global Review of U.S. Foreign Policy Slated

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

WASHINGTON (AP) — With the election behind him, President Johnson is due to plunge into a global review of U.S. foreign policy in the next few days.

The war in South Viet Nam and a dangerous and growing crisis in the Atlantic alliance are his first concerns.

This policy review could reshape the pattern of U.S. relations with the European allies, according to present thinking of North Atlantic Treaty Organization. It may also bring about a revision of Johnson's plans to make a start on foreign travels and personal, summit-level diplomacy in the immediate future.

It was learned several weeks ago the President hoped to address a NATO meeting in Europe and talk with French President Charles de Gaulle and other leaders before the end of the year. His chief advisers now believe that pending policy studies the trip should be delayed until next year. The final word is up to Johnson.

The President is scheduled to meet here in a month or six weeks with the new British prime minister, Harold Wilson. Meanwhile, some consideration is being given to his sending a special emissary abroad to take a first-hand look at European developments.

In a few days Johnson is expected to confer with Secretary of State Dean Rusk, Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara and other top advisers either here or at his ranch in Texas. His advisers have urged him to get as much rest as possible following the rigors of the campaign.

Johnson's triumph at the polls Tuesday was interpreted by administration officials as a mandate to carry on the main lines of established, bipartisan policy, including efforts to improve relations with the Soviet Union and reduce the risks of nuclear war.

Yet changing world conditions — among them the Kremlin shakeup last month and Red China's nuclear explosion — are said to require decisions adapting basic policy to new U.S. initiatives.

Persons close to Johnson also regard the election outcome as vastly strengthening his hand in dealing with foreign governments. Not only has it provided evidence of popular support of his general policies in the foreign field, but it has also ended his temporary status as successor to the late President John F. Kennedy.

The President is said to be deeply concerned about taking practical steps quickly to rebuild allied unity as far as that may be possible. There is little hope here that De Gaulle, whom officials regard as the central figure in the present turmoil over Western Europe's future, can be persuaded to cooperate.

France is now actively fighting the U.S. plan to form a NATO seaborn nuclear force, which West Germany strongly supports. De Gaulle, according to diplomatic reports from European capitals, has warned West Germany that success in the multilateral nuclear force — MLF — project would wreck NATO. Some officials here regard this as virtually a French threat to abandon NATO.

In a dispute with West Germany over grain prices, De Gaulle has also threatened to halt French participation in the European Common Market. On this issue the United States and other European allies generally support De Gaulle's insistence for a settlement of the grain price problem and feel that West German Chancellor Ludwig Erhard should take firm action to get an accord.

The war in South Viet Nam is a source of growing concern in the administration for two reasons. One is the desire to find new ways, if any exist, of moving toward the successful conclusion which would establish peace and security in Southeast Asia against Communist subversion. The other is a belief that North Viet Nam and Red China may be near some major decisions themselves on whether to intensify their efforts to drive the United States out and take over the area.

Related to this situation, but far broader in total impact, are the change in Kremlin leadership with the ouster of Premier Khrushchev last month, China's entry into the nuclear arms race and maneuvers by Moscow and Peking to reduce the rift between them.

Perhaps the most serious short-range problem coming up for study by Johnson is whether measures can be devised to offer greater assurance of protection to such countries as India and Japan against the time when Red China will actually possess nuclear weapons and the means to deliver them on distant targets.

Retired Machinist Has Own Railroad

It took Chapman over 10 years of working part time and $2,500 to build the seven scale model cars that make up the train powered by miniature steam locomotives. The trains, down to the last nut and bolt, are replicas of their 180-ton counterparts, scaled three-fourths of an inch to the foot.

Rare Birds Guarded in Newfoundland

By ED WALTERS

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (AP) — When John Cabot came upon Newfoundland June 24, 1497, he was struck by two things—the vast quantities of fish and clouds of seabirds.

It wasn't long before destruction of the birds began and it continued along the Newfoundland coast until conservation measures in the mid-19th Century gave the first hint of respite.

One species, the great auk, became extinct at the beginning of the 19th Century. The great auk was a favored of hunters because it was unable to fly. After the auk's disappearance greater hunting pressure fell on other birds.

Today the murres, puffins, razor-bills, petrels, kittewakes and gannets have five sanctuaries where they can nest and breed in safety.

The nesting grounds are forbidden territory to humans, rats, cats, dogs and other predatory creatures. This suits the birds who prefer the loneliest and most precarious crags they can find.

For centuries men had climbed cliffs of islands to take eggs from nesting birds or to kill the birds. Some ornithologists believe the species survived only because many nesting areas were inaccessible.

Today hunting is permitted in season at other parts of the coast, usually in fall and early winter.

Favorite quarry among seabird hunters is the murre. The flesh is dark in color and has a distinctive taste of fish, since fish is the diet of all seabirds.

The murre is white with a black head. Its eggs are laid on any convenient rocky ledge and are somewhat conical in shape, which keeps them from rolling off.

Puffins and petrels burrow into turf to lay their eggs. Petrel parents stand 24-hour shifts, one spending a day at sea hunting while its mate sits on the egg, then they change places.

Times Do Change In Many Ways

NEW VIRGINIA, Iowa (AP) —Mrs. Jean Felton of New Virginia says times do change, in many ways.

Recently, she had a dental appointment in not-too-far-away Des Moines for her daughter Cynthia.

Mrs. Felton left home at 1:45 p.m. daylight time to pick up Cynthia at school in nearby Truro at 1 p.m. standard time, and arrived in Des Moines in time for the appointment, at 3:15 p.m. daylight time.

Airline Travel Still Puzzles News Reporter

By WARD CANNEL

NEW YORK (NEA) — We noticed with considerable amazement last July that United Airlines had scrapped its first-class seats and was offering instead one - class transcontinental flights.

We decided at the time to wait a couple of months and then check to see how the change was working. If the American culture were shedding the peacockery of prestige and getting down at long last to fundamentals, we wanted to be the first with the news. You have no idea what it feels like to be the only kid on the block whose basic research has never been quoted by Vance Packard.

Besides, it is very rare when so clear a sign of change in the civilization comes along. For the most part, we have discovered, it is impossible to measure progress in the jet age because every change is so new. You simple cannot tell if you are getting anywhere when they keep replacing the landscape before you can pass it.

But when the two months had passed and it came time to check on the one-class service, we learned that it had gone. And in its place United Was running a three-class flight.

So we made a note to wait a couple of months and then check to see how the change was working. To our way of thinking, nobody is more in tune with the basic changes in the civilization than big industry. And certainly no industry's progress is more upward and onward in the jet age than the airlines.

Well, the two months were up the other morning. So we checked United and also quite a few airlines. But unfortunately, we cannot report anything substantial on how the civilization is doing.

Getting rid of the first-class, it turns out, was nothing more than somebody's bright idea to increase revenues. And in replacing it with three-class service was somebody else's bright idea to rememdy the loss of revenue brought on by the first bright idea.

But it is mean't to win United when the entire airline industry invoivokes the same muse. And frequently with the same results.

Eighteen years ago, night coach service was inaugurated to compete with the non-scheduled airlines. It worked splendidly, but left the day flights rather empty.

Last summer, a mid-week reduced fare was inaugurated on transatlantic flights with vacationers. It worked wonderfully. Midweek flights were jammed. But there were plenty of seats available on the weeekends.

Between the night coach and the mid-week reduced fare is a march of bright ideas which are, in the words of an American Airlines official, so "very complex and somewhat illogical" that it is impractical to let a computer handle them.

If you care to fly from Los Angeles to Miami, stopping in Chicago and New York for a while, we would be happy to assign a staff to show you 45 different types of service and fares to choose from—each one a bright idea in its day.

We have no quarrel with bright ideas. That is what makes progress.

JENNY LIND SCHOLARSHIP FINALLY STARTING

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Capital University has begun payment on a 113-year-old debt to Jenny Lind, the famed "Swedish Nightingale" contralto of the 19th Century.

When she came to Columbus for two concerts in November, 1851, William Reynolds, Capital's first president, persuaded her to contribute $1,500 for endowment of a Scandinavian theological professorship. Interest was to be for the benefit of needy Scandinavian students.

Board minutes indicate that $1,300 was loaned to the Seminary, which decided to appropriate the loan toward payment of $1,600 advanced to the president's salary. Now, at this late date, Capital officials feel a once - every-four-year scholarship to an entering woman vocal student would be the best way to set things straight.

'More Light' Gets St. Louis More Trade

By LEO SOROKA

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — The "Gateway to the West" is sporting what is described as "the most brightly lighted downtown complex in the nation," a sight to see.

Workmen are putting finishing touches on new mercury-vapor lighting units which extend over 144 downtown St. Louis city blocks. The new lights improve night - time illumination more than 12-fold, according to General Electric engineers.

Chicago is said to have the nation's most brightly lighted street, with St. Louis second.

However, Chicago's State Street "glows" at a bright 15 footcandles — a measure of illumination — for only seven blocks. By comparison, luminaires light 10 miles of downtown St. Louis streets with at least 1? and up to 20 footcandles.

Gordon L. Hopper, spokesman for Downtown St. Louis, Inc., comprising about 400 downtown business firms, said "store, restaurant and treater owners have already noticed a distinct increase in night-time business."

"With the old incandescent units," Hopper said, "people were reluctant to venture downtown at night. When they had shopping to do they preferred to visit well-lighted suburban shopping centers."

Police also look on the well-lighted streets as favorable to a reduced crime rate. When New York city installed similar mercury - vapor lighting in 111 "tough" blocks in New York city, there was a marked reduction in crimes of personal violence, rape and assault.

The new lighting in St. Louis resulted from adoption of a $4 million bond issue by taxpayers for the express purpose of a modern lighting system.

A $7 million bond issue was recently passed in San Francisco to replace 22,000 street lights with mercury-vapor.

St. Louis has undertaken a huge redevelopment program to rebuild 10 per cent of its area by 1970 at a cost of one-half billion dollars. Blighted downtown riverfront areas have been demolished, new buildings are going up, including a downtown 55,000-seat stadium and, nearby, the 630-foot Gateway Arch rising skyward.

Well - lighted streets, merchants say, will bring a rebirth to the downtown area.

Wedding Boom Is Reported In Japan

By ROBERT CRABBE

TOKYO (UPI) — A foreigner who wanders into Toky's Meiji Memorial Hall any time during the next two months is apt to think he's blundered into a movie set or a madhouse.

Scurring around the place will be young men in striped pants, old Japanese women in ceremonial black kimono, white-robed priests of Japan's Shinto religion, and a small army of waiters and major domos.

The puzzled Westerner also will see young Japanese women, many of them in white wedding formals that would easily pass muster in Paris or New York.

It will dawn on him that this is a place where people get married. But if he look further he will find that Japan's wedding catering houses tie the knot with an asembly line precision seldom seen in the West.

Japan is in the midst of a wedding boom. As in most places its papa who pays, and the Japanese father is paying like never before. Not since the palmy days before the depression and the Chinese War has Tokyo seen so many spectacular nuptial ceremonies.

There are more Japanese with money to spend these days than at any time since the 1920's and a lot of them are spending it on wedding ceremonies that cost around $1,500, in a country where the average monthly wage is still only about $120.

Meiji Memorial Hall, one of the most famous of the Tokyo wedding caterers, is booked solidly through November. You can't hire its services now, unless you're willing to settle for a ceremony early in the morning or around dusk.

Meiji Hall's top - flight wedding catered to 100 guests, runs as high as 400,000 yen (about $1,100). For this sum, the hall's staff sends out the invitations, throws a post-wedding banquet, and provides all the guests with traditional souvenir present.

"This year they all want to go to Kyushu or the southern part of the country," says a spokesman for the Japan Travel Bureau. He adds that few of them go overseas, though many expres interest in Hawaii.

In Tokyo's downtown business district, the travel bureau has set up a special "newlyweds' corner" to deal with the honeymoon trade.

"They're all trying to get the most for their money, and they all have a lot of questions," says one harrassed travel official.

'Too Clever' Man to Steer British Rule

By TOM A. CULLEN

LONDON (NEA)—Ever since he became leader of the British Labor party nearly two years ago, Harold Wilson's critics have been saying that Britain's new prime minister is "too clever by half."

This is just about the most damning thing a Briton can say about a British political leader. "Too clever by half" mean that is the leader is not to be trusted, that he bears watching.

Americans will soon have opportunity to judge whether such distrust is justified. The United States will be hearing a lot about Harold Wilson in months to come.

Despite Labor" razsor-thin-victory, it appear that Wilson will press with his programs, which may be at odds with those of the United States chiefly in the field of international relations.

For example, Wilson has announced his intention to lead Britain out of the nuclear arms club. This means scrapping Britain's own nuclear deterrent. It also means re-negotiating the Nassau agreement, whereby the United States agreed to supply Polaris missiles to Britain.

The new Labor prime minister is also opposed to the idea of a multinational nuclear surface fleet.

In other words, with Wilson at the helm of Britain the United States may be forced to re-examine her defense policy. It may mean more reliance on West Germany as an ally in the future. The possibility of Socialist Britain joining forces with Gaullist France in order to wreck NATO also cannot be ruled out, according to some observers here.

Another area in which American policy-makers will tangle with Wilson is his insistence that Communist China be seated in the United Nations. This was one of the planks of the Labor party election platform.

Exclusive of foreign affairs, Wilson, periodically, has borrowed many of the ideas which he will now seek to put into operation from an American—the late President Kennedy. The Labor leader's admiration for Ken- is unbounded.

Wilson is expected to introduce such innovations as weekly press conferences, and to make the office of prime minister more like that of the U.S. president.

He has surrounded himself with bright young men who re-resent the brains of industry, the universities and the scientific laboratories.

As one of its first priorities, the Wilson government will force through the House of Commons a bill to nationalize Britain's steel industry, which will affect the nation's entire economy. As an ardent Laborite explained before the election:

"With steel in our hands we will have control of the commanding heights in industry."

On the positive side, Wilson, as far back as 1947, showed that he could get tough with Russians. He was handling a $11 million trade agreement with Moscow for the British Labor government in power at that time.

He was then president of the Board of Trade and, at 31, the youngest Cabinet member since Pitt. His opponent in the trade neogations was Anastas Mikoyan, the wily Armenian.

Wilson flew to Moscow three times for the trade talks, the first visit being exploratory. The second dragged on for five weeks. Night after night Mikoyan haggled with the hard-headed Englishman.

Finally, their differences were whittled down to one point. Wilson kept a plane warmed up, ready to take off for London the moment Russian intransigence forced him to break off the talks. Mikoyan thought he was bluffing. But at 2:30 a.m., Wilson left without signing.

By the time Wilson returned in December, Mikoyan had changed his tune. Agreement was reached after one 17-hour session. When the toasts began, Wilson was one of the few negotiators, a British or Russian, who managed to remain on his feet in the sea of vodka.

His friends claim that Wilson made up his mind to become Britain's prime minister when he was 8. At that age, his father, an industrial chemist, brought young Harold up to London from their home in Yorkshire. He took him to Downing Street where the boy, wearing knee pants and a cap too big for him, had his picture taken in front of No. 10, the prime minister's residence.
